Hesperia Entrusting Next Phase Of City Administration To Police Chief

By Mark Gutglueck

HESPERIA—The City of Hesperia, which has at nearly every stage of its 29-year history been challenged from a managerial standpoint, is again rolling the dice with regard to placing City Hall under the leadership of a-yet-unproven city administrator, defying the odds once more.

Nils Bentsen

In this instance, after the departure of Mike Podegracz, who served as city manager for just over a decade, the city has turned to sheriff's captain Nils Bentsen to serve as the city's tenth city manager.

The current city council is pinning its hopes on Bentsen, who has earned the council's trust by virtue of his demonstrated competence in overseeing the Hesperia sheriff's substation, which serves as the Hesperia Police Department. Rather than carry out a statewide or nationwide search for a candidate to take on the responsibility of overseeing operations in the 90,173-population city, the current council has gravitated to Bentsen, who will be the third consecutive city manager in Hesperia who had either not trained for a career in municipal management or had no prior experience in that capacity.

Bentsen faces a challenge. Indeed, Hesperia, which has infrastructure and span of control issues that dwarf those of nearly every other city in the county, has long suffered from being led by inadequate, inexperienced, self-interested, overly politically-involved or outright dishonest city managers. Two of those have been convicted of felonious activ-

5 SBC Cities Had Hand In Pushing State Toward Reviving Redevelopment

A. Patrick Muñoz

Nearing half a decade after a move by the governor and the state legislature to close out municipal redevelopment programs, provisions that replicate at least some of that authority have been reestablished.

It is worth noting that while the dissolution of redevelopment agencies was both roundly criticized for depriving cities and counties of a useful tool in eliminating blight and conversely praised for stemming the abuse and corruption of that authority, the mechanisms the governor and legislature have created to replace it reproduce both the positive and negative features of the old system.

Redevelopment agencies were formerly adjuncts to local governments which were chartered to reduce blight in local communities and generate economic development. Those redevelopment agencies were empowered to utilize money available from the state and federal government, otherwise obtain loans or financing, or to use their own authority to issue bonds, the proceeds from which were used to eliminate blight and build infrastructure. The improvements from this redevelopment activity would then, theoretically, result in an increase in the value

PUC Okay Of AV Ranchos Sale Triggers Apple Valley's Condemnation Suit

APPLE VALLEY—A decision by the California Public Utilities Commission last week conditionally approving the sale of Western Water Holdings LLC to Liberty Utilities has complicated even further the already star crossed effort by the Town of Apple Valley to acquire the Apple Valley Ranchos Water Company. Reflexively, the town this week moved to invoke its eminent domain authority to seize the water company.

The California Public Utilities Commission signed off on a proposed settlement agreement between the joint applicants of Liberty Utilities, Liberty Western Water Holdings Inc, Western Water Holdings LLC, Park Water Co. and Apple Valley Ranchos Water Co. and the Office of Ratepayer Advocates with regard to the $327 million sale. With the application conditionally approved, the prospect of the Town of Apple Valley being able to reasonably afford to purchase locally-based Apple Valley Ranchos Water. The town now faces a protracted legal battle in which the use of eminent domain is its trump card.

This renders the decision by the maiden Apple Valley Town Council made less than a year after the town's 1988 incorporation to spurn an offer to sell the town the Apple Valley Ranchos Water Company for $2.5 million even more of a regrettable one than was previously recognized. It now appears that the town will need to pay a figure approaching $100 million to take control of the water infrastructure serving the community.

The Apple Valley Ranchos Water Company was created in 1945 by Newt Bass and B.J. Westlund as an adjunct to their real estate company, Apple Valley Ranchos, their undertaking to develop Apple Valley after they acquired 6,500 acres from the Southern Pacific Railroad for $2.50 per acre. Their intention was to install the minimum amount of infrastructure to support the construc-

Afghans & Iraqis At Ft. Irwin As War Training Props Mistreated, Suit Charges

A group of Middle Easterners recruited to assist in building and to then inhabit mock-up Iraqi and Afghan villages located on the grounds of the Fort Irwin National Training Center for the purpose of realistically simulating the environs soldiers will be called upon to wage combat in during overseas assignments have filed suit against the Army contractors who constructed and operated the facilities.

Eighteen of the Iraqi and Afghan nationals, represented by Phoenix-based attorney Dennis Evans and the Phillips Dayes National Employment Law Firm, filed suit in Los Angeles Federal Court against Calnet, Inc., Acclaim Technical Services and Parsons Government Services, Inc.

According to the suit, in their effort to maintain verisimilitude with the primitive conditions of the villages they were seeking to emulate, the contractors created them without modern American conveniences and creature comforts, such as running water, toilets or electricity.

The foreign nationals were forced to endure the hardships typical of their homeland in these accommodations, and, in carrying out their role-playing, were forced to stay in place 24 hours a day for extended periods of time, in one span for 19 consecutive days, remaining continuously in character and unable to avail themselves of the standard amenities afforded to most Americans.

Subjecting them to those conditions, which included denying them meal breaks and rest periods, constituted a violation of the California Labor Code, according to the suit.

A major bone of contention between the employees and employers, according to the suit, was compensation for "sleep time," with employees contending they should have been paid for all of the time they were required to remain in the ersatz villages. The government con-

Board Keeps Devereaux Firmly In Control Of The County

Greg Devereaux

San Bernardino County Chief Executive Officer Greg Devereaux will remain on track to serve out the full ten years specified in his employment contract with the county, it was announced Wednesday, after his annual evaluation by all five members of the board of supervisors on Tuesday.

"The board continues to have complete confidence in Mr. Devereaux as CEO," according to a county press release.

"We had a very productive discussion about what we are doing well, challenges we have faced and addressed, and how to continue to move forward. Yesterday was an example of how the board members and CEO are effectively working together to address the county's needs and move the county forward," said board of supervisors chairman James Ramos.

Devereaux was appointed to the newly created position of county chief executive officer in 2010 to succeed the county's former top executive, Mark Uffer, who carried the title of county administrative officer.

Upon his hiring in January 2010, Devereaux was given an extraordinary degree of job security, autonomy and sway over county operations in addition to the enhanced title.

tion of subdivisions and make the community grow, anticipating that as Apple Valley matured, that infrastructure would be replaced by higher quality pipes, reservoirs, pumping units and appurtenances. It would turn out, how-ever, as the town was built piecemeal, the water company merely expanded with it, a hodge podge of water mains and lines built one after the other, patched together in correspondence to the new development it was called upon to serve.

In 1987, Park Water Company, which provides water to Compton, Downey and Norwalk in Los Angeles County and was then owned by the Wheeler Family, acquired the Apple Valley Ranchos Water Company. When the town incorporated in 1988, city officials had the opportunity to purchase the company for $2.5 million, but declined, choosing not to convert the Apple Valley Ranchos Water Company to a municipal division, concerned less about the initial expense of acquiring the utility than with the projected ongoing and constant costs of having to repair, upgrade and maintain the system. In 2011, the Carlisle Group acquired from the Wheeler Family at a cost of $102.2 million the Park Water Company, which in addition to its Los Angeles County and Apple Valley holdings, also owns the Mountain Water Company, based in Missoula, Montana, serving some 50,000 people. The acquisition of Park from the Wheeler Family was part of the Carlyle Group's long term investment strategy of acquiring assets that can immediately return money in terms of sales of a commodity, in this case water, to a reliable customer base, while representing a future sales profit potential, whether those assets are spun off individually or collectively.

In 2011, the town impaneled a so-called blue ribbon committee to consider acquiring Apple Valley Ranchos, but advised against it. Prevailing sentiment abruptly changed in 2014, however, when Park, after beginning to implement in 2012 rate increases on Apple Valley Ranchos customers totaling 19 percent and then completing $8.1 million in capital improvements to the Apple Valley Ranchos Water Company in 2014, instituted another 30 percent rate hike on Apple Valley Ranchos customers to be implemented from 2015 until 2017. Shortly thereafter, town officials began trading notes with Missoula city officials, where Park Water's Mountain Water Company had likewise escalated rates.

Subsequently, the city of Missoula utilized its power of eminent domain to condemn and seek to acquire Mountain Water Company from Park Water Company. Mountain Water fought the takeover, but when the matter went to trial before Judge Karen Townsend in April it resulted in Townsend on June 15 entering a judgment in favor of Missoula.

Even before Missoula prevailed in that case, town of Apple Valley officials began angling to take Apple Valley Ranchos away from Park Water Company. As articulated by the town, it believes it will be able to purchase Apple Valley Ranchos through a financing strategy involving issuing bonds and that it will be able to service the bonded indebtedness and carry out improvements to the water system by means of the payments made to the city by water users/customers, i.e., the town's residents. The town's officials maintain that the revenue from the water sales will be dedicated solely to this bonded debt service and water division operations and maintenance and can be effectuated without any water rate increases.

That scenario was highly dependent upon Park Water's willingness to sell the Apple Valley Ranchos water system lock, stock and barrel for a price of the town's choosing, i.e., around $50 million. In support of this, the town, obtained from what it referred to as "an independent appraisal firm" the rather wishful "fair purchase price" of $45.54 million.

The town in a public statement said that it "would like to purchase the company in a negotiated transaction." That was met by Park's response that Apple Valley Ranchos Water Company was not for sale. To city officials consternation, they learned that Park was in discussions with Algonquin Power & Utilities Corp., a Canadian utility company, for the sale of all of its California and Montana assets. A publicly disclosed offer was $327 million. Liberty is an American subsidiary of Algonquin and that sale, following the California Public Utility Commission ruling, is about to be recorded.

Several issues were at play before the California Public Utilities Commission, which received a challenge to the proposed sale in November 2014.

Town officials enunciated concern that the joint application left open questions as to how Algonquin/Liberty would balance out the proposed $327 million purchase price for Park Water without subsequently imposing substantial increases in the rates Apple Valley residents and businesses would pay for their water, particularly given that Algonquin/Liberty would need to assume at least $77 million of of the property within those redevelopment agency project areas. The increased property tax revenue from those areas, referred to as tax increment, would be earmarked to pay back the loans or debt service the bonds, that is, pay the bondholders.

In 2011, the state legislature at Governor Jerry Brown's instigation passed legislation, ABX1 26 and ABX1 27, closing out the more than 400 municipal and county redevelopment agencies in California.

Brown asserted that there were recurrent abuses of the redevelopment system and that the money would be better utilized for public education and public safety programs.

A confederation of California cities and counties challenged ABX1 26 and ABX1 27, but ultimately the California Supreme Court ruled that both bills passed by the legislature and signed by Brown passed constitutional muster and redevelopment agencies were dissolved on February 1, 2012. Successor agencies were created to wind down their affairs. A primary function of those successor agencies was to ensure that the financial commitments made by the redevelopment agencies when they were active, such as the sale of bonds to bond purchasers which had to be debt serviced over the 20-year to 25-year to 30-year to 35-year life of the bonds, were met.

Two or three score of the cities throughout California, including four – Twentynine Palms, San Bernardino, Rancho Cucamonga and Chino - in San Bernardino County, sought to exploit the unexplored legal issues relating to the standards under which these successor agencies were to function to preserve a vestige of their redevelopment authority. Those efforts met with varying degrees of success and failure.

By far the most aggressive and successful of the San Bernardino County cities in waging this effort to prolong the use of its redevelopment agency was Twentyine Palms.

Even before AB X1 26 and AB X1 27 were passed in 2011, the 25,048-population city in San Bernardino County's remote desert outback hatched a plan to protect its redevelopment funding. As the redevelopment agency-dissolution legislation was being considered in Sacramento, the Twentynine Palms City Council, which doubled as the city's redevelopment agency board, issued two tax allocation bonds for a downtown revitalization undertaking known as Project Phoenix, which is to include a community center, a 250-seat theater, classrooms, a civic plaza, a park, a walkway, residential units, a wastewater treatment plant, and improvements to the downtown fire station. That bond money was made available before the law went into effect but was never expended.

Having made that precautionary move, the City of Twentynine Palms in 2012 embarked on a feisty challenge of the state Department of Finance in its effort to wrest back $31 million in bond proceeds.

Twentynine Palms City Attorney A. Patrick Muñoz, of the law firm Rutan & Tucker, then filed legal action on behalf of the city in Sacramento Superior Court, the venue where the legislation required any litigation pertaining to cities' use of redevelopment money had to be filed. The case was heard by Sacramento Superior Court Judge Michael P. Kenny.

Muñoz asserted in filings with the Sacramento Superior Court that the non-taxable bonds issued in 2011 created specific obligations between the city, as the issuer, and the bond purchasers, and as such are enforceable obligations and any use of the money for a purpose other than what the city had specified in marketing the bonds to the bond buyers would constitute fraud.

The California Department of Finance in December 2013 told Kenny that the Twentynine Palms Redevelopment Agency, like several other redevelopment agencies/cities, "rushed to encumber future tax increment revenues" ahead of those agencies' legislated demise in December 2011. The department alleged that in March 2011, Twentynine Palms "conceived, authorized, issued and sold $12 million in tax allocation bonds for the Project Phoenix downtown development and an affordable housing plan without contracts to build or a definite plan for spending the proceeds."

Ultimately, however, Kenny ruled against the California Department of Finance in April 2014 and granted the petition for a writ of mandate on behalf for the city of Twentynine Palms as successor agency, allowing the city to utilize the bond money for the fulfillment of Project Phoenix. In June 2014, the Department of Finance filed an appeal of Kenny's ruling.

Thereafter, the Department of Finance suffered multiple setbacks with regard to several cities' efforts to control the spending of redevelopment agency money appropriated in 2011. On May 14, 2015, the department sent a letter to several cities, Twentynine Palms among them, announcing it would no longer oppose those cities' moves to preserve their last remaining redevelopment agency projects.

Twentynine Palms is now free to carry Project Phoenix forward.

Whereas Twentynine Palms succeeded in its effort to extend its redevelopment agency's existence, the City of San Bernardino saw its effort end in abject failure.

San Bernardino, which filed for Chapter 9 bankruptcy protection in 2012, sought to convey $108.3 million from its redevelopment agency to a newly created municipal adjunct, the San Bernardino Economic Development Corporation, to thwart the state's seizure of that money. That $108.3 million consisted primarily of property that had been landbanked by the redevelopment agency over the last several decades. In anticipation of the passage of AB X1 26, the San Bernardino City Council on March 17, 2011 approved the transfer of the real property assets to the San Bernardino Economic Development Corporation. But in March 2013, California Controller John Chang and the controller's office's chief auditor, CPA Jeffrey V. Brownfield, informed city officials in a 53-page document that the transfer of the assets to the nonprofit the city chartered was an illegitimate attempt to have the city maintain control of redevelopment money that was supposed to be transferred to the state. Chang and Brownfield rejected as misrepresentations the city's contentions, propounded in November 2012, that "All of the asset transfers to the San Bernardino Economic Development Corporation occurred during the period of January 1, 2011 through January 31, 2012, and the assets were not contractually committed to a third party prior to June 28, 2011."

Furthermore, according to Brownfield, "The board of directors for the San Bernardino Economic Development Corporation is made up of City of San Bernardino council members, who previously acted as the board of the redevelopment agency. The City of San Bernardino and the San Bernardino Economic Development Corporation share common governing boards and have coterminous boundaries. The City of San Bernardino provides administrative and related business support for the San Bernardino

Observations from a Decidedly Continental Perspective

By Count Friedrich von Olsen

Word comes that Upland and Montclair are extending the conflation of their respective fire departments' administrative and command staffs another two years...

North Montclair and South Upland border one another. All of Montclair borders Los Angeles County on its west side. Where Upland's west side does not abut Montclair, it also meets Los Angeles County. Upland has a population of 73,732 and covers 15.6 square miles. Montclair boasts 36,664 residents within its 5.5 square mile confines. The idea of consolidating the two cities' fire departments was first raised by Montclair City Manager Edward Starr in 2013. Following discussions with then-Upland City Manager Stephen Dunn, the cities' respective councils signed off not on forming a single fire department but on sharing administrators. That change consisted of Montclair not replacing its departing fire chief and Upland's fire chief taking on the title of chief for both cities. The departments merged battalion commanders as well. What was suggested was that if this worked out, a full merging of the department might be effectuated in the future…

This experiment was embraced by just about everyone, though Upland Councilman Glenn Bozar pointed out that the lion's share of the savings accrued to Montclair rather than Upland. He wanted a more even distribution of the savings. While Upland's residents are wealthier than Montclair's, Montclair, which is home to the Montclair Plaza, is a richer municipality than Upland based on sales tax receipts. This tussle over money has perhaps retarded the progression to a full-fledged consolidation of the department. That, in my view, is a shame, because a merger would be a splendid economy for both cities. Having one department in this geographically compact two-city area would reduce the redundancy in manpower in place now…

For other reasons, this type of consolidation is an idea the time for which has come. Why stop at just Montclair and Upland? How about including Chino and Chino Hills? And Ontario and Rancho Cucamonga into the bargain?

I am anxious for the full Upland/Montclair merger to take place because it could prove a gateway to other adjoining cities adopting this concept. Already Colton and Loma Linda share a single fire department. They are ahead of the curve on this. How about Fontana, Rialto and Bloomington forming a common department? Years ago, Apple Valley Town Mayor Nick DePrisco talked about his town, Hesperia and Victorville forming a tri-city alliance in which they would have not only a shared fire department but a joint police department as well. For some reason that idea was never executed upon…

This brings me to an even grander concept I will float here: In addition to merging different but proximate cities' fire departments, why not merge the police departments and fire departments as well? Instead of having police officers and firemen, we could have public safety officers fulfilling both tasks. This would have multiple benefits. An obvious improvement is that it would fill in the extensive down time firemen now experience in the hours and hours they expend just simply hanging around the fire station. Instead, they could be out patrolling the streets…

In addition, this would oblige our police officers to cultivate extensive lifesaving skills they today are not required to have, ensuring that our first responders are trained and equipped to deal with whatever it is they encounter…

tractors dispute that. On multiple occasions, the foreign nationals were forced to awaken from a sound sleep to engage in the training exercises.

Moreover, according to the suit, the foreign nationals were virtually imprisoned within the staging villages, as there was no transportation available to them and they had no realistic prospect of leaving the remote locations.

"Defendants and plaintiffs had no agreement to exclude sleep time from their compensation," the lawsuit maintains. "Employees would regularly complain about not being paid for this time, and were simply told if they did not like it they could go home. Employees were trapped on a base for the entirety of a rotation" with "no means to leave."

The Army maintains simulated battlefields on the expansive grounds of Fort Irwin to allow soldiers scheduled for deployment to the Middle East or North Africa to experience combat conditions they are likely to encounter there. These include the fabricated villages populated by "role players" who are instructed to comport themselves as they would in their native countries.

The battle training exercises were carried out at all hours of the day and night, according to the suit. "They were always required to be on duty, in character and costume," the suit states. "Employees would regularly be woken up at all times in the night during the rotations. They did not receive a period of five hours of uninterrupted sleep time as such sleep is compensable."

The plaintiffs were overworked and shortchanged on pay, in defiance of state law, according to the suit. The foreign nationals were essentially working 24 hour per day for weeks at a stretch, according to the suit, but were paid for no more than 12 hours per day. "Plaintiffs were under the control of the defendants from the minute they were on the base," the suit states, noting they were provided with time-and-a-half when their time cards reflected they had worked more than 40 hours in any given week. Nevertheless, according to the suit, they were not paid for all the time they worked, such as when they were forced to remain on the base around the clock, 24 hours each day.

The suit asks for back pay on wages not paid, which is to be calculated as overtime, interest and damages for labor law violations. The suit further alleges and unfair competition.

Economic Development Corporation."

Chang ordered that the city of San Bernardino "direct the San Bernardino Economic Development Corporation to reverse the transfers of assets in the amount of $108,372,060.20 and turn over the assets with any outstanding related liabilities to the successor agency. The successor agency is directed to properly dispose of these assets in accordance with [AB X1 26]."

Three other San Bernardino County cities made efforts to shelter their redevelopment agencies and their assets from the ravages of AB X1 26 and AB X1 27.

When the state embarked on the legislative move to close out redevelopment agencies, the City of Ontario asserted that $21,677,224 in sales-tax money generated within what had been Ontario's redevelopment agency project areas was not subject to seizure by the state under the auspices of AB XI 26 and AB XI 27. Ontario utilized the money in question to fund major portions of its police, fire and other service programs.

The state laid claim to $21.7 million in sales tax revenue Ontario moved into accounts for the Ontario Housing Authority, which was utilizing the money on its mixed-use Town Square Project.

At the direction of Governor Brown, California Director of Finance Ana Matosantos on August 19, 2013 sent a letter to the state Board of Equalization, ordering the board to withhold Ontario's sales tax revenue beginning in September of 2013. "Despite numerous orders by the Department of Finance, the city has refused to remit to the San Bernardino County auditor-controller $21,677,224 in unencumbered low-to-moderate income housing fund assets of its former redevelopment agency that are in the city's possession," Matosantos wrote.

AV Water Sale

existing long-term debt tied into Park's assets. A year ago, the California Office of Ratepayer Advocates entered its own protest with regard to the application, citing a succession of issues which were counter to the public interest.

The California Public Utilities Commission's tentative ruling last week set those concerns aside and essentially shuts the door on blocking the sale to Liberty. And while it does not rule out the possibility that Apple Valley might acquire Apple Valley Ranchos from Liberty, Liberty's willingness to pay what the market bears for Park's collective water assets is a strong indication that the Town of Apple Valley's notion that it will be able to acquire Apple Valley Ranchos for anything near the $45.54 million the town's "independent" appraiser says it is worth or the $50.3 million offer recently tendered by the town in informal discussions with Park is a pipe dream.

Indeed, the Sentinel is informed, Park Water officials "scoffed" at the town's $50 million offer.

Liberty Utilities California put out a public statement early this week that company officials are now looking beyond the anticipated closing of the transaction so that the company can become "an intrinsic part of the Apple Valley community."

The California Public Utilities Commission said that Liberty's acquisition of Park's assets would not interrupt the "continued safe, reliable and reasonable operation of Park Water and Apple Valley Ranchos." Its decision was less clear with regard to the takeover's impact on rates and charges.

Liberty offered somewhat ambiguous assurances "against post-transaction rate increases" taking place.

Park Water, under the aegis of Apple Valley Ranchos, in August acquired, for $300,000, Yermo's water system, which serves some 900 residents in that desert community, which lies roughly 36 miles from Apple Valley. That acquisition complicated the town's effort. Park Water indicated it was purposed to undertake $1.1 million in infrastructure improvements to the system in Yermo and Liberty has indicated it is in consonance with that plan. Yermo's system continues to be an element of Apple Valley Ranchos' assets.

Town officials made a number of statements with regard to Apple Valley Ranchos' acquisition of the Yermo system, seemingly overlooking the consideration that they had no authority to halt what was ultimately a private company's investment decision. Town officials intent on obtaining Apple Valley Ranchos want that entity for local water provision purposes only and are thinking in far narrower terms than were Park Water officials or are Liberty corporate officers now. That dissonance of purpose and perspective has created a circumstance in which the town has been unable to realistically assess the scope of the action it is trying to take and has accordingly been unable to formulate an approach that would have attained Park's cooperation. That circumstance persists with Liberty.

In November, the town council passed two resolutions of necessity to take the system by eminent do-main.

On Thursday January 7, the Town of Apple Valley filed formal condemnation action to acquire the Apple Valley Ranchos Water Company.

According to the legal pleading, filed in San Bernardino County Superior Court, acquisition of Apple Valley Ranchos will give the Apple Valley community "control over its water future instead of having in controlled by out-of-state and out-of-county corporate executives dedicated to maximizing corporate profits."

Apple Valley Mayor Barb Stanton said, "The owners of our water system left us no choice but to pursue this action. The Apple Valley Water System does not represent free enterprise in the way one normally thinks of it. It is a monopoly, granted by the government and which, with the help of the California Public Utilities Commission, determines how much you will pay and how much profit it will make. As a customer, you aren't given a choice – or a say."

In a town press release hailing the legal action, it was stated that condemnation proceeding was initiated to wrest from Algonquin/Liberty the "town's privately held water system after years of excessive rate increases, surcharges and corporate decisions that have boosted profits at the expense of ratepayers" following "long-standing public concern" about Apple Valley Ranchos Water Company's monopoly hold on water

Glimpse Of SBC's Past

Ralph Swing

By Mark Gutglueck

Born on November 4, 1874 in San Bernardino to Mr. and Mrs. James Wesley and Mary Garner Swing, Ralph Emerson Swing would become one of the foremost lawyers and lawmakers of the region in his day. Early in his public life he would play a leading role in protecting the water rights of San Bernardino County. After becoming a state legislator he was instrumental in bringing Colorado River water to California. Still, in representing the larger venue of Southern California, he became aligned with, and his action assisted, Los Angeles interests, the very ones who had designs on San Bernardino County water assets.

Swing's knowledge of politics and the law were areas of expertise inherited from both his mother and father. Future Senator Swing toiled at his father's side in the family store situated in a brick building at 4th and D Streets in San Bernardino. Upon graduating graduating from San Bernardino High in 1895, he went to work straightaway in the law offices of Mr. George B. Cole, which allowed him to trace the footsteps of his noted uncle Mr. Randolph Swing, the San Bernardino County representative during California's Second Constitutional Convention of 1878-1879. After completing a two-year apprenticeship under Mr. Cole, in 1897 Swing received a certificate licensing him to practice law in the courts of the State of California.

He set about establishing the independent practice that consumed his attention from 1897 to 1899. In 1899 the young barrister formed a partnership with Mr. John P. Hight, a noted attorney of many years in the city of San Bernardino. Operating from an office in the Garner building, the pair enjoyed moderate success.

While Yet In Private Practice

In 1900, he ran, unsucesfully and as a Democrat, for the California Assembly in the 72nd District. In 1902, Swing accepted an invitation to serve in the capacity of San Bernardino city attorney. That same year Swing and Miss Pearl Harris were joined in matrimony. As city attorney, Swing wrote and instituted policies and ordinances aimed at controlling crime and vice or otherwise limiting it to "a proscribed area." Many of the ordinances defining the acceptable limits of the vice-district, valid use of slot machines and other gambling related devices and activities would serve as templates for a number of state bills authored by Senator Swing during his long and noted tenure in the State Senate. Swing founded the National Orange Show in San Bernardino of which he served as the first president in 1910 and also served a term as the city attorney of Upland.

In the 1910s, he represented San Bernardino in the city's landmark legal battle with Riverside over control of local water.

In January 1921, the city of Pasadena initiated an effort to appropriate water rights along the Mojave River. After buying or securing options on some riparian properties along the river, Pasadena filed an application with the California Water Commission to allow it to divert 110 cubic feet per second from the Mojave River by means of a 70-mile long aqueduct to provide water and power services in that city. Upon learning of the move, land and water rights owners in the Victor Valley pooled their interests and lobbied the board of supervisors to protest Pasadena's move and oppose the application. Swing was hired to represent the county before the state water commission.

According to John Brown and James Boyd in their book The History of San Bernardino And Riverside Counties, which was published in 1922, "He has been connected with much of the important litigation growing out of the many complicated and intricate legal questions involved in the adjustment of water, property and mining rights necessarily arising from the development of the resources of Southern California. He is an admitted authority upon the law governing the questions above mentioned, as well as upon the law governing municipalities and involved in municipal legal questions. He is much sought as a counselor upon such subjects and as an attorney in matters involving such questions.

Brown and Boyd continued, "That Mr. Swing has made a success is evidenced by the fact that he stands at the top of his profession and is conceded to be one of the foremost lawyers in the southern part of his native state.The reason for that success is largely due to the energy exerted in behalf of and his loyalty to his clients. It is said of Mr. Swing that he never takes a case that he cannot conscientiously and sincerely advocate to the court, or in which he does not believe his client to be in the right. As a result of such action he has gained and retains the confidence and respect of the courts and of his fellow attorneys. Aside from following his profession Mr. Swing has taken a great interest in the citrus industry and its development, and in civic affairs, and has done much toward the development of a proper civic spirit in his home community. Being a native of San Bernardino, one of the principal objects of Mr. Swing has been to bring the financial, civic and moral standing of his home city to the highest possible standard. Mr. Swing's prominence in public affairs, combined with his ability as a lawyer and his dependability as a man, have made him one of the best-known figures in San Bernardino County, and won for him the approval of all with whom he is brought into contact."

On November 7, 1922 Swing was elected as a Republican to the California State Senate in the 30th Senatorial District. He was reelected to that position in 1926. In 1930, he was returned to the State Senate, this time in the 30th District. He was reelected there in 1934, 1938, 1942 and 1946.

On September 17, 1924, about 250 delegates from thirty-eight Southern California cities and communities met in Pasadena and formed the Colorado River Aqueduct Association. At this meeting, they established a committee to draft "an act authorizing the formation of a public district for the purpose of bringing water from the Colorado River ..." On January 19, 1925, Senator A. B. Johnson of Imperial County and Senator Swing of San Bernardino County introduced the legislation as SB 178. The Johnson-Swing bill led to the development of the Hoover Dam.

The California State Senate, in one of its first amendments to the proposed act, established the Metropolitan Water District for the purpose of "developing, storing and distributing water for domestic purposes ..."

The initial Metropolitan Water District Act, as introduced by Senators Johnson and Swing, proposed that each member agency would have one representative on the board of directors. In 1927, the California Senate, in one of its last amendments to the proposed act, allowed member agencies to appoint one additional director for each $200 million of assessed value. The rationale was that because the initial construction of the Colorado Aqueduct and the appurtenant facilities would be financed with local property tax revenues,those agencies with the greatest financial burden should have a greater presence on the board.

Los Angeles dominated the early boards, relegating San Bernardino County to second glass status with regard to water policy.

Among Swing's other legislative accomplishments were bills forcing the decentralization of state offices and the restoration of public utility property to local assessment roles. Other noted bills sponsored or authored by Senator Swing of note were the State Agricultural Proration Act of 1938 and several liquor and gambling related bills.

In 1944, he was a delegate at the Republican National Convention

The Ralph E. Swing arena, an indoor auditorium with a10,000-patron capacity with access from E Street, was constructed and named in his honor at the grounds of the National Orange Show in San Bernardino in 1949. It became a venue for many national and international entertainment acts, such that a generation of local residents who were too young to remember Swing as a politician, knew of his stature in the community. On September 11, 1981, the auditorium was irreparably damaged when it was struck by a small plane, killing two people including the pilot. In th aftermath, the building had to be destroyed.

At the time of his retirement in 1950, Swing was known as the dean of the State Senate. Ever the astute businessman, Swing spent his waning years with his second wife Adelaide developing a 2,000 acre property on the north shore of Salton Sea known as the Desert Sea Ranch. A large portion of this property was devoted to a tangerine farm, the fruit from which the enterprising former senator and noted attorney marketed under the name of his ranch.

The Old Lion Of The California Senate In 1950

When he died on February 6, 1961, Senator Swing was survived by his wife, Adelaide; son, Everett H. Swing, a San Bernardino attorney; and a brother, Congressman Phil David Swing of San Diego.

ity relating to their activity in managing other Southern California cities after their departures from Hesperia.

In promoting Bentsen, the city is looking to recreate the relative success it had with his immediate predecessor, Podegracz, like Benson a department head promoted from within whose familiarity with Hesperia stood him in good stead when he was faced with the task of running it.

Hesperia, at 73.209 square miles, is San Bernardino County's third largest city geographically, having been nosed out for first and second by Victorville and Apple Valley, at 73.741 square miles and 73.523 square miles, respectively. Providing adequate infrastructure over its sprawling spread would be challenge in any event but is exacerbated by the depredations of the man celebrated as the "father" of modern Hesperia, Penn Phillips.

In 1954, Phillips was the vice-president and director of Standard Federal Savings and Loan Association of Los Angeles. On April 22 of that year, in what was billed as the largest private land sale in Southern California in 35 years, Phillips' corporate entity Omart Investment Company bought a 36-square mile tract seven miles south of Victorville, representing roughly 90 percent of the entire township of Hesperia, for $1.25 million from the Appleton Land and Water Company and the Lacey Estate, which had owned the land jointly since 1888. He created the Hesperia Land Development and Hesperia Sales Corporation, which worked to promote his concept of the U-Finish Home, mass-produced housing units that were completely finished on the outside, leaving the buyer to complete the interior. He secured water rights to support this community. Phillips simultaneously announced his intention to spend $8.25 million through the Hesperia Land Company, a subsidiary of Omart Investment Company, to prepare the property for development, indicating 1,000 acres of the property was to be allocated to industrial development, 8,000 acres for agriculture and that 5,000 homes would be built along with a two-and-one-half mile-long-and-one-quarter-mile-wide artificial lake, and a resort section. The formula Phillips applied in Hesperia was much like the one he used with his developments elsewhere: secure land, build homes on it, put in the minimal amount of infrastructure to make the homes habitable, bring in a population that creates the basis for a community that includes momentum for establishing some form of a jurisdictional governmental agency, sell all of the parcels acquired, take a profit and move on to the next development elsewhere. Phillips built roads for Hesperia that were of a decidedly low standard, consisting of a mixture of desert sand used as aggregate and bitumen to create a road that was no more than one-and-a-half inches thick. The roads, when new, looked good, but under the withering sun and use, began to deteriorate within three to four years. The flash floods the desert is prone to further washed out these roads over the following decades, leaving many of Hesperia's streets in poor condition, including some that eventually returned to being nothing more than dirt roads. Phillips was equally irresponsible in the creation of the town's water system. Though he started with the tremendous advantage of Hesperia being blessed with a world-class water supply, he squandered that asset in his head-long pursuit of a profit. Hesperia lies near the headwaters of the Mojave River, the watershed area north of the San Bernardino Mountains, a pristine and perpetually recharged water supply created by melting snow and overflowing rainwater from the heights southeast of Hesperia. The water system Phillips created for Hesperia consisted in large part of pipes cannibalized from a petroleum conveyance operation from depleted oil fields. Thus, the Hesperia Water Company, capturing water at the foot of the mountain before it rushed forward to become the Mojave River and wend out into the desert, used substandard pipes, which compromised the quality of the product provided to Hesperia for domestic use.

In the more than half century that has passed since Phillips took his final leave of Hesperia, the city has struggled to overcome its inferior infrastructure foundation. This was worsened by decisions made by the fledgling city council shortly after the city was incorporated in 1988. Looking southward at the upwardly mobile population of Rancho Cucamonga, a city which had incorporated a mere eleven years before in 1977, the newly formed city council, led by mayor Bruce Kitchen and councilmembers George Beardsly, Mike Lampignano, Percy Bakker and M. Val Shearer, lured Rancho Cucamonga Deputy City Manager Robert Rizzo to town to serve as the city's first city manager. Deluded into thinking that cityhood would instantly transform their city into an economically dynamic hotbed of upscale developmennt similar to Rancho Cucamonga, the city council empowered Rizzo to cut deals with developers to convince them to begin building aggressively and soon. Rizzo took the council's somewhat naive instructions too literally, pushing his planning staff to approve projects as proposed by developers, entailing projects with sketchy or inadequate infrastructure, both in the immediate vicinity of the neighborhoods which were springing up as well as throughout the city in general. In some cases, Rizzo, to meet payroll, diverted bond money intended for the provision of infrastructure into the general fund, where it was eaten up by the day-to-day expenses of running the city. In time, many of the landowners inveigled into the assessment districts created to debt service those bonds lost those properties in tax foreclosures as the promised increases in the value of their properties failed to materialize because the infrastructure those bonds were supposed to pay for was never built. Correspondingly, the sales tax producing development that was to accompany the improvements to those properties in question never materialized, depriving the city of revenue that could have been converted into infrastructure improvements.

And Rizzo was manipulative and dishonest, exploiting the very city council members who hired him, enabled him and directed him to develop the city at any cost. During the 1990 election, he arranged with developmental interests to get scores of residents in Orange County to write $99 checks in blank and entrust them to him. He then distributed those checks to the candidates up for election in the city council race that he deemed to be most accommodating of the pro-development agenda, including Percy Bakker, M. Val Shearer and planning commission member Donna Roland. In this way, Rizzo was seeking to obtain leverage over those to whom he was answerable. No one on the council objected until press accounts in early 1992 revealed what had occurred. Even then, the council sought to minimize the transgression. But public outrage over the corruption of the electoral and governmental process forced the council's hand and in April 1992, Rizzo left the city.

Some 18 years later, Rizzo's corrupt manipulations of the elected city officials who hired him came home to roost when a series of legal, financial, managerial and governmental transgressions he had engaged in as city manager with the City of Bell came to light and he was arrested, criminally charged, convicted and is now serving a 12-year sentence in state prison.

Rizzo was replaced by D.J. Collins, who for years had been the general manager of the Hesperia Water District. Under Collins, the water district in short order was subsumed by the city. Collins made little headway in dealing with the city's infrastructure problems, and though he succeeded in diverting some of the money available from the city's water operations to shore up the city's inadequate road system, he and the council were strongly criticized for having broken a commitment to strictly devote water revenues to maintaining the city's water system. Collin's administration was severely challenged by "the revolt of the Young Turks" in the fire department, which came about when many of the fire department's personnel, most of whom were close to a generation younger than Collins, objected to the city overriding efforts by the fire marshal to strictly enforce the state and municipal fire code with regard to new development as City Hall sought to liberalize regulations and encourage building.

Collins would be succeeded by a succession of relatively short-lived city managers – David Berger, Steve Dukett, David Bentz and Steve West. Following West's departure, the city council temporarily elevated assistant city manager Rod Foster to the city manager's position. In 2000, Western Water made an overture to Hesperia with regard to purchasing the city's municipal water division. Making that pitch for Western Water was Robb Quincey. Quincey, who had a bachelor of arts degree in public administration and political science from the University of Minnesota, a master of public administration degree from the University of South Dakota and a doctorate in public administration with an emphasis in economics and organizational development from the University of La Verne, left quite an impression on the city council, though they did not accede to his suggestion that they sell the city's water system to Western Water. Nevertheless, in October 2000 they offered Quincey a position as city manager. He accepted the offer. Titularly, Foster returned to his assistant city manager's post. Quincey, however, had no actual experience in managing a governmental organization. He proved highly dependent upon Foster, who in essence served as city manager during Quincey's more than four year tenure as city manager in Hesperia. In March 2005, Upland Mayor John Pomierski succeeded in convincing Quincey to jump ship and take on city manager duties in the City of Gracious Living. For twenty days after Quincey's departure, Foster again served as interim city manager in Hesperia. In Upland, where like in Hesperia his reputation exceeded his skill level, Quincey soon recognized he was in over his head. He convinced Pomierski to hire Foster to serve as his assistant city manager. Foster then followed Quincey to Upland.

In Upland, Pomierski was engaged in a series of depredations, including shaking down individuals with business projects pending before City Hall to hire him as a "consultant" to facilitate their projects' various approvals. The mayor's bribe taking and acceptance of kickbacks grew legendary. Quincey, as Pomierski's handpicked choice to serve as city manager, facilitated much of Pomierski's action. In 2009 Foster left Upland to become city manager in Colton, at

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF: ALEJANDRO PADILLA PROPS 1501181 To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of ALEJANDRO PADILLA A Petition for Probate has been filed by: EMILY PADILLA [and] DANIELLE PADILLA in the Superior Court of California, County of SAN BERNARDINO. The Petition for Probate requests that: EMILY PADILLA AND DANIELLE PADILLA be appointed as personal representative[s] to administer the estate of the decedent.

The petition requests the authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows: Date: FEBRUARY 18, 2016 Time: 8:30 A.M. Dept: S37 Address of court: Superior Court of California, County of San Bernardino 247 West Third Street San Bernardino, CA 92415 Probate Department If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California Law. You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk. Attorney for Petitioners: RICHARD LEPORE SBN# 103341 Address: 601 SOUTH MILLIKEN AVE. SUMMONS (CITACION JUDICIAL)

Notice to defendants (Aviso al demandado):

STEPHEN LYNNE AND DOES 1-25

You are being sued by plaintiff (Lo est demandando el demandante):

CYRUS CHU

NOTICE! You have been sued. The court may decide against you without your being heard unless you respond within 30 days. Read the information below.

You have 30 CALENDAR DAYS after this summons and legal papers are served on you to file a written response at this court and have a copy served on the plaintiff. A letter or phone call will not protect you. Your written response must be in proper legal form if you want the court to hear your case. There may be a court form that you can use for your response. You can find these court forms and more information at the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp), your county law library, or the courthouse nearest you. If you cannot pay the filing fee ask the court clerk for a fee waiver form. If you do not file your response on time, you may lose the case be default, and your wages, money, and property may be taken without further warning from the court.

There are other legal requirements. You may want to call an attorney right away. If you do not know an attorney, you may want to call an attorney referral service. If you cannot afford an attorney, you may be eligible for free legal services from a nonprofit legal services program. You can locate these nonprofit groups at the California Legal Services Web site (www.lawhelpcalifornia.org), the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp), or by contacting your local court or county bar association. NOTE: The court has a statutory lien for waived fees and costs on any settlement or arbitration award of $10,000 or more in a civil case. The court's lien must be paid before the court will dismiss the case.

¡AVISO! Lo han demandado. Si no responde dentro de 30 días, la corte puede decidir en su contra sin escuchar su versión. Lea la información a continuación.

Tiene 30 DIAS DE CALENDARIO después de que le entreguen esta citación y papeles legales para presentar una respuesta por escrito en esta corte y hacer que se entregue una copia al demandante. Una carta o una llamada telefónica no lo protegen. Su respuesta por escrito tiene que estar en formato legal correcto si desea que procesen su caso en la corte. Es posible que haya un formulario que usted pueda usar para su respuesta. Puede encontrar estos formularios de la corte y mas información en el Centro de Ayuda de las Cortes de California (www.sucorte.ca.gov), en la biblioteca de leyes de su condado o en la corte que le queda mas cerca. Si no puede pagar la quota de presentación, pida al secretario de la corte que le dé un formulario de exención de pago de cuotas. Si no presenta su respuesta a tiempo, puede perder el caso por incumplimiento y la corte le podrá quitar su sueldo, dinero y bienes sin más advertencia.

Hay otros requisitos legales. Es recomendable que llame a un abogado inmediatamente. Si no conoce a un abogado, puede llamar a un servicio de remisión a abogados. Si no puede pagar a un abogado, es posible que cumpla con los requisitos para obtener servicios legals gratuitos de un programa de servicios legals sin fines de lucro. Puede encontrar estos grupos sin fines de lucro in el sitio web de California Legal Services, (www.lawhelpcalifornia.org), en el Centro de Ayuda de las Cortes de California, (www.sucorte.ca.gov) o poniéndose en contacto con la corte o el colegio de abogados locales. AVISO: Por ley, la corte tiene derecho a reclamar las cuotas y los costos exentos por imponer un gravamen sobre cualquier recuperación de $10,000 ó más de valor recibida mediante un acuerdo o una concesión de arbitraje en un caso de derecho civil. Tiene que pagar el gravamen de la corte antes de que la corte pueda desechar el caso. The name and address of the court is: (El nombre y dirección de la corte es):

She instructed Cynthia Bridges, the executive director of the Board of Equalization, to withhold from Ontario distribution of "sales and use tax" equal to the sum of $21,677,224. "If the sums withheld in the first month are insufficient to satisfy the $21,677,224 that the city owes to the affected taxing entities, we direct the Board of Equalization to continue the withholding in each successive month until the owed amount is fully retired," she wrote.

Well before the state followed up with a letter to the San Bernardino County auditor-controller's office, instructing it to distribute the money to county schools, the county and other local agencies, then-Ontario City Manager Chris Hughes wrote to Matosantos, informing her that "Since the city is not in possession of the funds, the Department of Finance does not have the legal authority to order the city's sales and use taxes to be withheld." Hughes' assertion that the city did not have possession of the funds was based upon his contention that the Ontario Housing Authority is an entity that is separate and distinct from the city of Ontario.

Ontario was better equipped than most cities to carry out an expensive and protracted legal battle with the state, possessing a revenue stream greater than any other municipality in San Bernardino County, with a total of more than $462 million into all of its funds in fiscal 2013-14. Ontario Mayor Paul Leon said at that time, "The state never had the right to make that money grab and the way they are doing it is completely wrong. It is fiscally irresponsible at the state level for them to be peering into local coffers and taking what they see. I will be darned if the city of Ontario is going to make it easy for them. If they have a right to recoup that money, they are going to have to prove it and they are going to recoup it from legal sources, and that does not include the general fund of the city of Ontario or the pockets of the people of Ontario."

Ontario officials told the state in no uncertain terms that it would seek an injunction barring the Board of Equalization from garnishing the funds.

Indeed, Ontario's determination and its ability to back its claims with a spirited legal challenge is credited with having convinced the state that some concession with regard to making a tool to eradicate blight available to cities was needed.

Two other San Bernardino County cities - Rancho Cucamonga and Chino – did not take the state's action lying down, either.

Before AB X1 26 and AB X1 27 went into effect, Rancho Cucamonga was in the process of using its redevelopment authority and bonding capability to widen a portion of Foothill Boulevard on the west side of town, to undertake an I-15 interchange improvement project at Base Line Road on which the city had already spent $11 million and to make improvements to the public works yard on the southwest corner of Ninth Street and Hellman Avenue.

Because elements of those projects were not bid out at the time the redevelopment agency was closed down, the state maintained that money previously earmarked for those redevelopment efforts could not be used to see those projects to completion. The California Department of Finance held that bond proceeds for contracts made after AB X1 26 and AB X1 27 passed and were signed into law on June 28, 2011 are not "enforceable financial obligations."

The City of Rancho Cucamonga appealed the state Department of Finance's decisions in that regard and began exhausting all other administrative remedies in seeing that the money would be freed up. At the same time, the city solicited bids for the uncompleted work. City emissaries were dispatched to Sacramento to see if the Department of Finance would entertain the validity of the city's claims.

City attorney Jim Markman vowed that if the state continued to deny the city access to the money, he would file suit against the state in Sacramento Superior Court to test his interpretation of the law that bond proceeds can be utilized for "ongoing feasible projects."

That threat of legal action, simultaneous with the passage of new legislation, Assembly Bill 1484, strengthened Rancho Cucamonga's position. AB 1484 became law June 27, 2012 one day short of a year after AB XI 26 and AB XI 27 were passed, and allowed newly created "development agencies" to seek the return of bond proceeds that were taken away by AB XI 26's and AB XI 27's dissolution of redevelopment agencies. AB 1484 allowed remnants of previously available redevelopment money to be allocated to the successor development agencies, pursuant to a strict accounting and auditing re-gime.

Consequently, the necessity of Rancho Cucamonga's threatened legal action passed, and upon Markman's advice, the city council voted to utilize available money in the city's capital-improvement fund for the completion of unfinished redevelopment projects with the intention of the city seeking reimbursement from the proceeds of its already issued bonds as soon as they became available.

At the same time, Markman stood ready, if the state were to again seek to hold up the funding, to switch back into a litigative mode.

The city of Chino also refused to back down in the face of the state's effort to commandeer its redevelopment money.

In April 2012, the City of Chino's redevelopment successor agency, taking stock of the consideration that the City of Chino had made more than $15 million in loans to its redevelopment agency for improvements in its redevelopment agency project areas, submitted to the State Department of Finance a recognized payment schedule for the first half of 2012 that called for the successor agency to begin retiring the debt on more than $15 million in promissory notes issued by the Chino Redevelopment Agency and held by the City of Chino. In May 2012, the redevelopment successor agency followed up on its April action, and submitted to the state a recognized obligation payment schedule for the second half of 2012 that cited payment on the promissory notes as an outstanding obligation.

The Department of Finance, according to Jeff Oderman, an attorney for the Chino redevelopment successor agency, rejected the approved list, holding that loans made to the redevelopment agency by the city that founded it were, with the dissolution of the redevelopment agency, invalid debts. According to a number of attorneys, however, the promissory notes from the Chino Redevelopment Agency held by the city of Chino, like many other debts pursuant to loan arrangements involving other cities and their respective redevelopment agencies, were enforceable under AB X1 26 and AB X1 27. Chino then threatened it own litigative remedy in Sacramento Superior Court.

In reaction to the ending of redevelopment authorities, some cities sought to substitute in financing mechanisms such as Mello-Roos bonds, Marx-Roos bonds or the creation of community facility districts to pay for building streets, sidewalks, sewers, schools or such appurtenances to development. But Mello-Roos and Marx-Roos arrangements entailed votes of those to be assessed in ratifying the assessment districts, which would then require that residents or business operators in the district pay yearly assessments to debt service the bonds used to pay for the upfront creation of the infrastructure. Any home-, land-, or business-owners coming into the district in the future would be saddled with the assessments, even though they had not voted them in. For the creation of an assessment district to pass, a 2/3s vote of the residents/land owners in favor of the district creation was needed. Few approvals of such districts occurred in the 2011 to 2014 time frame.

By 2014, the state legislature relented, somewhat.

On September 29, 2014 Governor Brown signed Senate Bill 628 into law after both houses of the legislature had approved it on the last day of the 2014 legislative session. Senate Bill 628, which was introduced by Senator Jim Beall (D-San Jose), authorized municipalities and counties to create enhanced infrastructure financing districts, known by the acronym EIFDs, to fund infrastructure development and community revitalization. EIFDs can be created with greater ease than Mello-Roos or Marx-Roos districts and community services districts, not requiring a 2/3s vote, but rather by an act of the county board of supervisors or a city council. Or they can be put into place, involving the issuance of bonds and the devotion of tax increment funding to pay down that bonded indebtedness, on the authority of a vote by the people in which it needs to pass, not by 2/3s, but rather by at lesser 55 percent of the electorate in the district to be created.

Enhanced infrastructure financing districts can entail a bond payback period of up to 45 years from the date of the bonding approval, which is 15 years longer than was common with traditional redevelopment agency bond debt retirement arrangements.

Senate Bill 628 also allowed for the Enhanced Infrastructure Funding Districts to be utilized for a broader range of purposes than traditional bond funding mechanisms, including transit projects, low- and moderate-income housing, and environmental cleanup.

EIFDs are distinct from redevelopment agency bonding in one key respect. The tax increment devoted to cover redevelopment agency debt was diverted from education. That is, the property tax on property included in a redevelopment area was signed over entirely to the redevelopment agency. In the case of the enhanced infrastructure funding districts, any pre-existing property tax that is earmarked for schools will continue to go to that purpose. Nor can EIFDs divert property tax revenues from any non-consenting taxing entity within the jurisdiction of the district to be created.

During the 2015 legislative session, AB 2, which authorizes the establishment of redevelopment agencies under certain conditions and for certain purposes, was passed. It was signed into law by Governor Brown on September 22, 2015. AB 2 provides for redevelopment agencies authorized to utilize eminent domain to eradicate blight and, with limitations and under precise constraints, issue bonds financed by tax increment revenues derived from a defined blight eradication project area.

San Bernardino County Coroner Reports

Coroner Case #701509899 On Tuesday, December 29, 2015, officers of the San Bernardino Police Department were sent to the 400 block of Orange Show Road, San Bernardino, for the report of an unresponsive male in a donation bin. Upon arrival, they found Victor Augustine Robles, a 25 year old transient in the City of San Bernardino, wedged in the drop doors of the bin. Robles was declared dead on scene by San Bernardino City Fire Department personnel at 4:10 AM. The San Bernardino County Sheriff-Coroner Department will be conducting an autopsy to determine the cause of death. [12302015 0300 JK]

Coroner case #701509849 & 701509850 On 12/27/15, at 1:14 AM, Barstow Police responded to a single vehicle collision in the 1300 block of Irwin Road. A female was pronounced dead at the scene. A male was transported to Barstow Community Hospital where he was pronounced deceased. The investigation revealed that the vehicle was being driven at a high rate of speed. The female driver lost control of the car at which time it rolled over. Barstow Police is handling the investigation. The names of the decedents will be released when they have been positively identified and their families notified. [12282015 0530 JK] Update: names released. Carl Junior Hunt a 71 year-old resident of Barstow and Cathy Glyshaw a 40 year-old resident of Barstow. [12282015 0755 SC]

Coroner Case # 701509825 On Friday, 12/25/2015, at approximately 9:06 pm, Justin Batres Ceron, an 18 year-old male resident of Victorville, was the passenger in a 2012 Mitsubishi that was traveling northbound on Escondido Avenue, south of Sultana Street in Hesperia. The driver struck the back of a semi truck (also traveling northbound) and lost control, causing it to overturn. Batres Ceron was ejected from the vehicle and was pronounced dead on scene. The San Bernardino County Sheriff-Coroner Department, Major Accident Investigation Team, is investigating the collision. [12282015 0530 JK] which point any veneer of propriety at Upland City Hall was sundered and Pomierski's and Quincey's self-interested machinations could no longer be suppressed or hidden. Pomierski was indicted in 2011 and convicted in 2012 and imprisoned for a year. Quincey was fired in 2011 and criminally charged in 2012 and convicted in 2014.

Following Foster's departure for Upland in April 2005, Hesperia settled upon elevating city engineer/public works director Mike Podegracz to the city manager's position. As it would play out, having a top administer who had an intimate understanding of the city's infrastructure needs proved compatible with the city council's priorities, in particular Paul Bosacki, who was elected in 2008, in no small measure on the basis of his website, Paveroadsfirst.com, which promoted using all available revenue toward refurbishing the city's deteriorating infrastructure. Bosacki was replaced by Eric Schmidt in 2012. A new ethos has evolved on the city council, with Bill Holland, Russ Blewett and Paul Russ, and to a lesser extent Schmidt, in ascendancy. Last month, Podegracz retired. The council, which is led by Holland, a former sheriff's deputy, selected Bentsen to lead the city.

Bentsen is homegrown, having attended Hesperia Christian School and Victor Valley College. It is perhaps this status as a Hesperia Native Son that has distinguished him from past Hesperia sheriff's station commanders. Whereas previous sheriff's captains who have served as what is tantamount to the police chief in Hesperia have been, if not cold and distant, then straightforward and somewhat aloof, Bentsen seems genuinely interested in the community he grew up in and engages regularly with residents, city employees and elected officials, displaying what one long time city resident called "the human element." Since coming to Hesperia to serve as captain nearly three years ago, he has demonstrated himself, in another city resident's words, to be "cordial, intelligent and logical."

The decision to appoint him city manager passed on a 4-1 vote, with councilman Schmidt, the immediate past mayor prior to Holland, being the lone dissenter. Schmidt did not declare with any clarity the grounds for his objection to Bentsen, whether, perhaps, he was uncomfortable with placing into the topmost management role a leader without formal training in municipal administration or whether it was the subtle rivalry that has come to pervade the relationship between himself and Holland which was the motivating factor in his lone vote of opposition.

One area that is very likely to prove a test for Bentsen is negotiating the proper course between the city's need to improve its infrastructure and the imperative a majority of the council is likely to place on him in accommodating development. Holland and council members Paul Russ and Russell Blewett are virulently pro-development by basic orientation. They have been confirmed in that orientation by the degree of financial support provided to their electioneering efforts by the development community. An example of how their leanings in this regard is their rock solid support for the Tapestry Project, a proposed master-planned community now slated to add 16,196 homes to the city. Assuming those units will be filled with a household of four, the Tapestry Project alone promises to zoom the city's population from its current 90,173 to some 155,000. The intensity of that development in the southeast quadrant of the city has provoked serious opposition from a segment of the city's populace, who see it as too much urbanization in a community that features less density and more wide open space than the cities of the Inland Valley down the Cajon Pass or in Los Angeles County. City officials have continued to support the project, making a few concessions such as scaling it back from its originally proposed 19,200 homes. Moreover, the project's supporters point to the $12 million the project proponent, Terra Verde Group, will pay up front in development impact fees intended to cover the cost of infrastructure, in particular the widening of Ranchero Road, to offset the burden the influx of residents will represent.

While a minority of city residents are at one with Holland, Russ and Blewett and are pressing to have the project facilitated, an even more sizable segment of Hesperia and Oak Hills residents, not to mention those in Summit Valley, are adamantly opposed to making a radical change to the character of the property located near and on historic Las Flores Ranch.

Ongoing are Hesperia's continuing road integrity problems. Moreover, Hesperia has historically suffered from inadequate or even non-existent grading in large swathes of the municipality, which has created flooding problems in the city's industrial and commercial areas as well as its residential neighborhoods, resulting in some cases in fatalities. This circumstance represents a continuing liability to the city. And the city is bedeviled by the consideration that it is bifurcated by the Santa Fe Railroad tracks, which can be forded only at Bear Valley Road on the city's extreme north end, by means of the Myra McGinnis Bridge on Main Street in the central part of the city and the Ranchero Underpass at the city's south end. In this way, Hesperia is a city that is largely divided from itself, such that going from the east of the city to the west or vice versa often entails a commuting delay. Overcoming this problem is expensive, as the most recent fix to the dilemma, consisting of the Ranchero Underpass completed and opened in 2013, cost $27 million.

Another challenge that Bentsen faces is that departing with Podegracz was a significant portion of his municipal support network - director of development services Scott Priester, economic development director Steve Lantsberger and director of public Works Dale Burke. It is rumored that management services director Brian Johnson will soon depart the city as well. The loss of expertise and institutional memory these departures represent to not auger well for anyone thrust into the city manager's position. And these departures will put Bentsen in the position of having to answer to and please the political directives of the council collectively and its members singularly without having access to experienced and authoritative municipal planning staff to guide him.

Whether Bentsen now fully understands that the council majority may be asking him and the decimated municipal staff he leads to accede to a development agenda that is on track to repeat the mistakes of the past that put a higher priority on building houses and neighborhoods than on ensuring there is adequate infrastructure to service in the community. Since 2002, Apple Valley Ranchos' corporate owners raised rates by more than 65 percent, and in November, instituted yet another increase that will raise water costs for the average household by 26.58 percent."

The press release, in reference to Apple Valley Ranchos' acquisition of the Yermo Water Company, said Apple Valley residents were being consigned into "forced subsidization of failed water systems" and at the same time decrying "Carlyle's decision to sell its water interests to a Canadian company, Algonquin Power & Utilities Corporation. Both underscore the skewed economics that incentivize private water systems to pad profits by over-investing in imprudent projects that become part of their rate base, then turn around and sell off the company for far more than they bought it for."

Retiring Sheriff's Captain To Face Daunting Challenges In New Role As City Manager

support that development is an open question. A further question is whether, even if he does understand that future generations of Hesperians might be hurt by a mad rush toward development today, he has the strength of character and wherewithal to stand up to his political masters. Indeed, the Tapestry Project may be the first of a series of tests in this regard and if he approves amenable to rubber stamping the development community's proposals, the flood gates for further aggressive development may be opened.

Holland and Russ are further supported by city employee unions. Just as in the case of the demands and pressure on City Hall by the development community, Bentsen will need to make crucial decisions with regard to not only the size of city staff but the level of remuneration and benefits those employees are to receive. As a sheriff's department employee who is to retire at the age of 51 from that organization and receive a pension equal to 81 percent of his highest pay while working with the sheriff's department, Bentsen may not have what is perceived as the moral authority to hold the line on salary and benefits to be paid to city employees, even if in the years ahead council members who are less friendly to the employees union than Holland and Russ are elected.

And like every Hesperia city manager who came before him, Bentsen is saddled with an arrangement put in place when the city first incorporated which provides it with a return of only 1.57 percent to 1.59 percent of the property tax collected within its borders. In this regard, Hesperia is the long forgotten stepchild of San Bernardino County, receiving the lowest percentage of property tax than all of the county's 24 incorporated municipalities. Efforts have been made to adjust that inequity in the past, none of which succeeded. Should Bentsen take on that task and succeed in cracking that nut, he might on the basis of that alone lay claim to being, in a positive rather than a negative sense, the city's most noteworthy city manager.

Because he was engaged in transitioning from his role as Hesperia Sheriff's Station commander to city manager, which is to take place over the weekend, Bentsen was unable to participate in an interview with the Sentinel this week, his secretary said.

Cattle Spinach: Atriplex Polycarpa

Cattle Spinach, which is known by its scientific name, Atriplex polycarpa, as well as the common names allscale saltbush, allscale, desert saltbush and alkaline saltbush, is a medium to large shrub in the Chenopodiaceae family with dense, hard wood making up the lower branches and root crown.

In a habitat dominated by this shrub, all cattle spinach plants will be close to the same size, typi-cally three to six-and-a-half feet. It will vary in size when set amidst other types of plants.

Cattle spinach often bears an abundance of seeds that weighs over the branch tips. The twigs have light gray bark and the wood is yellowish inside.

In general, the plant's grayish-green leaves are small, usually one inch in length or less, oblong and more or less thickened and tough.

Spikes of greenish-yellow male flowers are borne above the clusters of greenish female flowers which only become apparent once the seeds begin development. Pollen becomes airborne and may be of concern to hay fever sufferers. This plant lacks thorns, although the thin, tough twigs may act as spines.

The plant bears fruit in the form of a scale-shaped nutlet with fine crenulations along its margin. There is usually a tubercle on the face. The nutlets are often borne in great abundance along the branch ends.

Native to the Southwestern United States, California, and northern Mexico, this plant occurs on deep, variously flooded soils that are usually alkaline, and occasionally on flood plains of rivers or areas near agriculture and irrigation systems.

This species blooms in July and August.

There are some insects which have an affinity for the Atriplex polcarpa. Often, the fuzzy galls of Asphondylia midges can be seen on the twigs of Allscale Saltbush. These galls offer a good identifica-tion clue for the plant.

Fuzzy Asphondylia midge galls cover the stems of some cattle spinach

For survival, certain insects must rely on plants such as allscale saltbush to make themselves less visible to predators. Casebearer moth larva, pupa and adults are all well-concealed on the cattle spinach plant. The very small larva of this moth tunnels inside a leaf. Once it grows too large for this narrow space, it will spin a silken case with only its head emerging to chew the plant leaves. The case is much the same color and texture as a brown leaf. The adult moth looks like a sliver of peeling stem bark and can rest mostly undisturbed on the branch stems. The full grown moth is only three to four millimeters long and normally goes unnoticed by most human observers and is even well camouflaged for sharp-sighted birds.

Because of similar coloration, the casebearer moth can sit on the twig of an allscale saltbush plant and escape detection.

could be cashiered on a simple majority vote of the board. Devereaux's contract stipulated that he could not be terminated on a simple 3-2 vote. Rather four votes of the board are needed to fire him.

In addition to bestowing on him that level of job security, the currently composed board and those that preceded it have deferred to Devereaux in nearly all particulars pertaining to county governance. The entire county budget is essentially a document Devereaux works up with assistance from the county's various department heads. He has been practically unfettered in giving direction to the county's lower echelons with regard to policy and operations. Whereas under previous county administrative officers board members would have direct dealings with department heads and were free to take up with each of the county's divisions specific issues or complaints lodged by the supervisors' constituents, any hashing out or ironing out of constituent problems now goes through Devereaux, and board members are no longer at liberty to talk to department heads. This is seen as both a sign of Devereaux's domination of the governmental machinery and the degree to which the supervisors want to be disengaged from the nuts and bolts

California Style
Color To Silver

By Grace Bernal

What better way to start the New Year than with rain? Rain boots, jackets/coats, and sweaters are here and it's also time to clear the page and refresh the fashion attitude. The color of pastel is looking very intense in a very natural pastel kind of way as they come into play with fashion. There are colors that match cranberries, celeries, and watermelon, and lavender along with amethyst, too, which seems to be everywhere. These colors appear to match fruits and vegetables.

But, the color I can't help noticing is the silver hair that's trending local streets. If you don't want to wait for silver to come with age and are thinking about a silver color, you should know silver hair takes time. Apparently, the application is a process which takes a while and money too. Because, unless you're blonde, the process is a tedious one due to cleaning out the hair from all color. But if you have your heart set on the silver trend, and you're the fun type along with patient, you will enjoy the journey of the color exploration that comes with the meantime stage before making it to silver. Until next time, have a great week and keep the color coming!

running of the county. On May 7, 2013, the board of supervisors guaranteed Devereaux's contract as chief executive officer to March 2017, with an annual salary of $305,000, which translates into a paycheck of $11,730.77 every two weeks. In addition to that, he is provided with an array of health, continuing educational, traveling & transportation, communication and information processing and retirement benefits. Yearly performance evaluations, however, remain a routine element of the relationship between the board and the top administrator and they present the major juncture at which the board's members have any leverage over the CEO.

In just-concluded 2015, the most severe test of the six-year running relationship between Devereaux and the board took place upon the board learning in October that Andrew Lamberto, who had been the county's human resources director prior to Devereaux's 2010 arrival, had been convicted in August of soliciting a prostitute in Orange County. That conviction stemmed from Lamberto's March arrest on the charge. Devereaux learned of the matter less than two days after the arrest but had not disclosed it to the board, instead imposing administrative discipline on Lamberto, which included docking his pay.

The disclosure of the arrest and conviction caught the board of supervisors flatfooted and instigated suggestions that Devereaux had withheld the information to arm himself with information with implicit blackmail potential over a key county department head that gave him even greater control over the county governmental structure than he already possessed. There was no clearly stated policy with regard to the disclosure of criminal charges or convictions of county employees to the board, however, such that Devereaux's withholding of the information regarding Lamberto did not provide the board with legal cause to discipline or terminate him. Moreover, because of the board's disengagement from the day-to-day operations of the county's departments involving nearly 18,000 employees, Devereaux was essentially free to handle the matter in the way he felt best, which arguably might have included a decision not to air the issue publicly and thereby prevent embarrassment or discredit being shed on the county.

There were two subtle indications in the press release put out on Wednesday that the Lamberto incident may have registered with the board. The first was a passage stating, "The board and the CEO will soon discuss potential changes to the CEO's contract that would institutionalize improved communication strategies and ensure consistent opportunities for the board and CEO to exchange information and ideas." This was augmented with a statement from Supervisor Josie Gonzales.

"I expect this will result in improved communication, a more inclusive leadership style, and a culture of mutual respect," said Gonzales.
