Soda Mountain Solar Farm Foes Hope Pending Election Will Doom Project

The 2016 electoral season has given the opponents of the Soda Mountain Solar Project one last hope in their effort to block the project, which is to be located on federal land and has already been given approval by the U.S. Department of the Interior.

The 287-megawatt facility to be constructed on 1,767 acres of public land would qualify as one of the ten largest solar facilities worldwide, representing a coup for the Barack Obama Administration, whose efforts to make a mark in promoting renewable energy programs bogged down in failure and scandal during Obama's first term as president with the squandering of a half-billion-dollar federal loan to Solyndra, a solar panel manufacturer, which then failed to deliver, as well as a $400 million loan guarantee from the Department of Energy to Abound Solar, which sold defective or underperforming solar panels and other related products. That money was provided to Abound, despite information having been provided to

Department of Energy officials that the panels were faulty before the company received taxpayer dollars.

Despite the consideration that the solar plant would represent a major stride in the effort to move away from reliance on the use of fossil fuels, environmentalists have taken issue with the project because of its siting on undisturbed, indeed what some re- See P 5

Suit Alleging Flipping Of Cars Seized By Sheriff's Dept. Heads To Trial

A lawsuit alleging San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department higher-ups instituted ticket quota mandates on its motor patrol deputies and participated in or condoned an illegal vehicle impounding hustle that netted department personnel seized vehicles following a rigged auction process is headed to trial later this month.

More than two years after it was filed, the lawsuit by three current and former sheriff's department officers who say they were rebuked and retaliated against for resisting and then exposing the illegal or unethical activity involving their commanders and colleagues has cleared the last major hurdle which would have prevented the legal action from proceeding.

In response to motions from attorneys representing San Bernardino County to have the lawsuit dismissed, Judge Bryan F. Foster found there were insufficient grounds to throw the case out, and all parties in the suit are due in court on August 29 to begin impaneling a jury to have the matter heard in open court.

Sergeant Tim Jordan, who is now retired, deputy Brian Moler and deputy Jeff Wetmore filed a lawsuit against San Bernardino County and the sheriff's department on July 25, 2014, alleging they experienced retaliation from their immediate superiors and other higher ranking department members after they reported a number of abuses or refused to participate in See P 4

Valdivia Emerges & Barrios Deserts To Put The Kibosh On SB Homeless Facility

John Valdivia

The San Bernardino City Council this week

reversed itself from its commitment two weeks ago to allow a Catholic-affiliated organization to establish a residential and educational facility to house and retrain up to 118 homeless men.

That reversal came on August 1 after councilman John Valdivia, in whose Third Ward the home was to be built and who was not in at-

when the initial vote on the proposed project was cast, registered his objection to the proposal and he was joined by councilman Benito Barrios, who switched his July 18 vote of support to one of denial.

St. Mary's House has already established two residential care facilities in San Bernardino, which serve homeless, battered, troubled or displaced women and children. Those facilities are located proximate to one another about a mile-and-a-half from the location on Walnut Street between Pico Avenue and San Marcos Street where the organization was seeking to establish the men's facility.

On July 18, the council voted 4-2, See P 3

H<sub>2</sub>O Quality And Safety Issues Hit Five County Communities

Water quality and/or safety issues have intensified in five San Bernardino County communities.

The most serious issue – radioactive contamination – previously manifested in three of the county's more remote and relatively sparsely populated districts. Accompanying the radiation in one of those areas are fluoride and arsenic contamination problems. The less serious issue – an algae bloom that has impacted the taste of tap water – is a recent development in the county's extreme southwest corner, even though the water originates elsewhere.

Out in the desert uranium and radioactive gross alpha particles have shown up in the water being delivered by San Bernardino County's Special Districts Department to households in Pioneertown and Morongo Valley's See P 2

County Inks Three-Year Deal With Deputies

San Bernardino County and the union representing sheriff's deputies and district attorney investigators have agreed to a three-year labor contract that will up rank and file law enforcement officers' pay by nine percent over the next 36 months.

The collective bargaining agreement, struck between the county and the San Bernardino County Safety Employees Benefit Association, which is known by its acronym SEBA, lays out a three percent per year salary increase, and ups the annual uniform allowance from $675 to $1,200, and increases the health insurance subsidy in steps so to achieve a $60 per month boost in the medical coverage for deputies' families by year three of the agreement.

The pact comes three months after SEBA members staged a demonstration in front of the county administration building at which their representatives asserted the union had cooperated with the county during the 2007-2013 recession by making contract concessions, only to be taken advantage of. Deputies then initiated a work slowdown which had as its centerpiece delaying the delivery of inmates incarcerated at the sheriff's department's various detention facilities to their court appearances.

San Bernardino County Pension System Investments Lost Money In 2015-16

By Mark Gutglueck

In the immediate aftermath of the pension fund system for San Bernardino County's public employees posting a negative return on its investments for fiscal year 2015-16, the president of the system's board and its official spokesman expressed confidence the system will remain solvent.

The San Bernardino

Brendan Brandt

County Employees Retirement Association, known by its acronym

SBCERA, showed an investment return of negative 1.1 percent – a net loss – for the fiscal year ending June 30, 2016.

SBCERA has set for itself a perpetual annual earnings goal of 7.5 percent on its total portfolio.

Long considered one of the healthiest and best managed public employee pension systems in the State of California, the San Bernardino County Retirement Association yet appears to be in a position of strength, with fund assets pegged at $8.09 billion. But that represents a drawdown of $125.7 million from association's fund balance a year ago.

And a troubling trend with regards to returns on SBCERA's investments has emerged in recent years.

While the pension fund posted earnings of a whopping 15.05 percent in 2012-2013 and an impressive 11.51 percent in 2013-14, in 2014-15, the rate of return was 4.4 percent. With the system having lost money in 2015-16, many observers are skeptical about the prospect of the association achieving its 7.5 percent earnings goal in 2016-17 or in 2017-18.

Indeed, over See P 5

Water Problems Current In Five County Communities from front page

Little Morongo and Hacienda Heights neighborhoods.

In Little Morongo the level of uranium measured in a liter of water registered at 38 picoCuries. Likewise the gross alpha radiation detected in water drawn in the same area stood at 38. In Hacienda Heights, the uranium level is 25 picoCuries per liter and 26 picoCuries of gross alpha particles.

The Environmental Protection Agency deems a uranium level of 20 picoCuries per liter to be unfit for human consumption.

In Pioneertown, the uranium level was below that in Little Morongo and Hacienda Heights, but still in excess of that deemed acceptable by the EPA, at 22.2 picoCuries per liter. While, relatively speaking, the Pioneertown water is less radioactive than that in Little Morongo or Hacienda Heights, it is contaminated as well with excessive levels of fluoride and arsenic.

The county Special Districts Department acknowledges that in addition to the elevated uranium in Pioneertown's water, its arsenic levels have measured as high as 0.065 micrograms per liter, more than six times above the EPA's maximum contaminant level of .01 microgram per liter. Moreover, Pioneertown's water measures 8.4 micrograms of fluoride per liter, more than double the EPA maximum level of 4 micrograms per liter.

According to a report to the county board of supervisors dated June 28, 2016 from Jeff Rigney, the director of the county Special Districts Department, "The special districts department, through its water and sanitation division, oversees the management, operations, and maintenance of the following water systems:

County Service Area 70, Zone W-3 (CSA 70 W-3), which has 150 active service connections within the Hacienda Heights community; County Service Area 70, Zone W-4 (CSA 70 W-4), which has 102 active service connections in the Pioneertown community; and County Service Area 70, Zone F (CSA 70F), which has 74 active service connections in the Little Morongo community. CSA 70 W-3 and CSA 70F water wells exceed maximum contaminant levels (MCL) for gross alpha and uranium. CSA 70 W-4 water wells exceed the maximum contaminant levels for arsenic, fluoride, and uranium. The wells in each system have some form of detectable constituent above the maximum contaminant levels allowed for a public water system."

To address water quality issues in these districts, county special districts staff prepared and submitted a construction grant application for

Zone W-4 seeking up to $5,045,000 under the State's Drinking Water State Revolving Fund to pay for the construction of a pipeline to interconnect with the Hi-Desert Water District. Under that plan, a pipeline paralleling Pioneertown Road with pumping stations would deliver Hi-Desert Water District water from Yucca Valley to Pioneertown. The county is seeking to purchase property from the Wildlands Conservancy to accommodate one or more of those pumping stations. State staff has asked for a refinement of the design plans for the project before providing funding. It does not appear that the state will provide funding to cover the full cost of the project if it will provide the grant at all, leaving the county and Pioneertown residents under the gun to come up with some $2 million more than would be available through the State Revolving Fund for the project. There are roughly 140 households/water customers in Pioneertown.

The presumably untainted water from the Hi-Desert Water District would be used to blend with the water from the contaminated wells, diluting the radiation, arsenic and fluoride to a level that would make the water safe for human consumption. The special districts department is also seeking grant funding for Zones W-3 and 70F for water treatment facilities as permanent water treatment solutions.

Rigney recommended that the county provide an interim solution to address water quality issues in CSA 70 Zones W-3, W-4, and F before the connection with the Hi-Desert Water District is achieved and before enforcement action is initiated by state, federal or county regulatory agencies. At Rigney's request, the board of supervisors authorized in June the submission of grant applications to the State Water Resources Control Board under the Interim Emergency Drinking Water Fund, requesting $757,834 in grants from a $1 billion drought relief package signed by Governor Jerry Brown last year, intended to cover the cost of providing bottled water to customers on an interim basis not to exceed three years until a permanent solution to address water quality issues is implemented.

Without bottled water or water imported from another source, the residents in the Little Morongo, Hacienda Heights and Pioneertown communities will continue to consume contaminated water.

San Bernardino County applied for the grant, saying in the application it wanted to use the money to deliver 5 gallons of Arrowhead bottled water to county water customers every two weeks for the next three years. But two weeks ago, the county received word that the state had denied the sine Richard dissenting, to signal acceptance of the project, approving a subdivision of the property to accommodate four phases of building on the 11.02-acre site along with a conditional use permit to allow the facility to operate.

The project came back this week for a second reading of that approval, as is required for all projects, together with a general plan amendment and a development code amendment/zoning map amendment which were needed to allow the previous approval to become effective.

The city's planning division manager, Oliver Mujica, essentially provided a reintroduction of the project proposal. Mujica said the project would be built in four phases, with the first consisting of improvements to 2.92 acres entailing four single story buildings of 7,000 square feet each accommodating up to 85 residents, including dining facilities and a common kitchen. This first phase would be completed, Mujica said, within two years of approval. A second phase 2.91 acres, Mujica said, would involve a single story building totaling 17,000 square feet to house medical and educational facilities for the residents. It would be completed within three years. The third phase, covering 3.05 acres, would provide 15 subsidized housing, two-occupant rental units accommodating 30 residents. It would be completed within four years, Mujica said. The fourth and final 2.14-acre phase, Mujica said, would consist of two single story buildings totaling 20,000 square feet and embody a support services facility and a chapel. It would be completed within five years. It was implied that there would be residences for three employee caretakers on the site, as well.

The property is located, Mujica said, on property currently zoned urban residential near both existing industrial grant application, reportedly because the funds are depleted.

In the meantime, the district is looking into tapping into some existing wells in the areas around Pioneertown, Hacienda Heights and Little Morongo that provide water untainted with arsenic, fluoride and uranium. Those wells are located on private property and are privately owned, requiring arrangements with those well owners.

Some 75 to 80 miles west by west southwest as the crow flies, residents in Chino Valley have experienced an unpleasant taste and smell to their tap water. Water officials are hoping the issue is a temporary one that will resolve itself. The culprit is believed to be an algae bloom at Silverwood Lake in the San Bernardino Mountains, a reservoir where roughly 20 percent of the water provided to Chino and some 15 to 20 percent of the water provided to Chino Hills by the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California originates.

The algae bloom takes place at Silverwood Lake every year about this time, as temperature and pH conditions combine to maximize the algae expansion. This year the bloom is slightly more pronounced than in recent years. The condition will likely have passed by mid-August.

The taste and odor change, while less than palatable, represents no health risk, officials maintain. The Metro-

Trial On Suit Alleging Sheriff's Personnel "Flipped" Impounded Vehicles Set For August 29 from front page

such at the Adelanto/Victor Valley sheriff's station and the Victorville sheriff's station. An amended complaint was filed by the attorney representing Jordan, Moler and Wetmore, Christopher L. Gaspard of the Ontario-based law firm Gaspard Castillo Harper, on March 3, 2015. According to Gaspard, the department engaged in the "unlawful practice of impounding citizens' cars for personal profit. In or about November 2010 sergeant Jordan was the administrative detective sergeant at the Adelanto Victor Valley Station. He was assigned to serve a detective with a previously prepared letter of reprimand for impounding a car during the service of a search warrant and later purchasing the car from the tow yard during a lien sale and giving the car to his daughter for her personal use. In early 2011 Sgt Jordan discovered that sheriff's personnel assigned to the department's narcotics unit would routinely tow vehicles and flip them by purchasing the vehicles at lien sales and selling them for profit. Based on information and belief, the sheriff's personnel who were flipping towed cars would call a particular tow company owned by the father of a deputy sheriff. This would occur regardless of the location from which the car was towed. When the vehicle came up for lien sale the owner of the tow company would contact the deputies and offer them the first chance of purchasing the vehicle. The owner of the tow company would discount the vehicles, often selling them for thousands of dollars below Bluebook value." The complaint continues, "Jordan reported this unlawful activity to a lieutenant on the department" but that after he was led to believe the department's internal affairs division would investigate the matter as potential criminal activity he was transferred from the Adelanto/Victor Valley Station to the Victorville City Station and assigned to graveyard patrol, what the suit calls "a backdoor deal that had been worked out between Captain [Greg] Herbert and then-deputy chief now sheriff [John] McMahon." The lawsuit further states that lieutenant Jon Billings at the Victorville Station imposed on the motor patrol officers working there a 200 traffic ticket per month quota and instituted a traffic citation tracking system in an effort to ensure they met that quota. Both Jordan and Wetmore resisted the quota system, insisting that setting citation writing goals was a violation of state law. According to the suit, in early July 2013 Billings gave recruits into the Victorville motorized patrol division an ultimatum that required them to sign an at-will agreement in which they pledged to achieve the 200 citation a month quota in exchange for being given the motor patrol assignments. There were further irregularities with regard to traffic citations, according to the suit. One of these entailed Billings and the captain at the Victorville Station, Sam Lucia, pressuring Moler into changing a traffic ticket he had written to a sheriff's department secretary to a warning citation. According to the suit, "Lt Billings routinely engaged in the practice of pressuring a subordinate employee into changing red light camera citations to warning citations." The suit maintains that "typically the citations involved young attractive women drivers. Sgt Jordan later reported the issue to Captain Lucia. Captain Lucia told Jordan that both he and the Lieutenant had the authority to dismiss citations as they saw fit." In 2013, Wetmore and Moler were drummed out of the motorized patrol division. The county and the sheriff's department are represented by the law firm of is Burke, Williams & Sorensen, LLP. On April 1, 2015 attorney Susan E. Coleman with Burke, Williams & Sorensen, in an answer to the suit denied all the allegations and asked for judgment to be rendered in favor of the county. That gambit failed.

Burke, Williams & Sorensen maintain Jordan was not compelled by the county to retire. Gaspard is prepared to demonstrate that giving Jordan orders to essentially violate the law left him in a position in which he had no choice but to quit.

Burke, Williams & Sorensen contend that the move to transfer Moler and Wetmore out of the motor patrol division did not come about because of their unwillingness to meet the ticket quota standard but rather for other rational manpower apportioning purposes that were entirely within the discretion of the department's command echelon.

More recently the county asked Foster to grant motions to dismiss several of the causes of action contained in the complaint. Foster did grant dismissals on two of those causes of action when the plaintiffs did not contest the motions. But Foster did not grant the motions across the board, and Gaspard is working toward completing and filing all necessary pre-trial documents to meet the currently scheduled August 29 trial start.

Glimpse Of SBC's Past William Mason

William Mason

William Ray Mason was born on December 4, 1887 in Morgansville, Kansas, the son of Robert and Nellie G. (Barr) Mason. His family moved to Los Angeles in 1898, where Will completed his schooling. At the age of 18 he went to work for the railroad, where he worked for eleven years in the mail service.

Will Mason married Ara G. Barclay in 1914 in the Ocean Park district within Los Angeles. They had three children, John, Roger and Helen.

In about 1916, Will and Ara Mason moved to Upland where he was a citrus rancher. He was active in a wide variety of community affairs for many years. They lived at 1302 North Euclid in Upland, in a three-story eclectic house originally built by Charles and Cecelia Lawson, to replicate their home in Buenos Aires

Following Ara's death in 1936, Will married Edith Hanson, who was "Gus" Hanson's daughter, in 1940. Edith grew up at 1060 W. Foothill Blvd, which is now a bank. Will's father-in-law was instrumental in founding the G.A. Hanson Fruit Company and was one of the movers and shakers of early Upland, serving on the first Upland City Council.

On May 8, 1944, Will Mason, a quiet, fine looking man, was appointed to the board of supervisors, representing the Second Supervisorial District, to fill the vacancy caused by the sudden death of Gene Grier in February 1944. He was elected in 1946 and reelected in 1950, and was succeeded in 1954 by Dan Mikesell. After ten-and-one-half years on the board, Mr. Mason retired to resume citrus ranching, and continued his varied civic activities. He was appointed to the Flood Control District's Zone 1 Citizen's Advisory Committee in April 1958, and served until November 1966. He resided in Upland.

Will Mason died in his home at 559 North Euclid Ave on May 8, 1971, at the age of 83. He was survived by his wife, Edith Hanson Mason, two sons, John H. Mason of Upland and Roger I. Mason of Ontario, a daughter Helen (Mrs. Phillip) Juergens of Stu-

County Pension-System Investments Go Sour In 2015-16 from front page

the last decade the earnings picture for SBCERA has dimmed. In the three-year period ended June 30, 2016 the fund returned an even 5 percent. In the five-year period ended June 30, 2016 the fund returned 6.1 percent per year. In the ten-year period ended June 30, 2016 the fund returned 4.8 percent per year.

The downward trend is a problematic issue, with potentially far reaching consequences. Part of the problem is that those vested and dependent on the system, at least at present, are immune from the investment pool's poor performance. Rather, it is the taxpayers – the vast majority of whom see no benefit from the system – who are most hurt when the earnings goal is missed.

The county's elected leaders – the board of supervisors – have guaranteed county employees, through the financial vehicle of SBCERA, a defined benefit plan. One feature of definied benefit plans is that the employer, i.e., the county and the 16 other local governments and governmental agencies that are participants in SBCERA - bear the responsibility of offsetting shortfalls during years the fund fails to meet its actuarial assumed rate of return. Conversely, when SBCERA exceeds its 7.5 percent investment earning goal, the county and the other governmental entities contribute less in response to the greater fund earning.

Upcoming Election Could Influence Decision On Desert Solar Project from front page

fer to as "pristine," land some six miles southwest of Baker. Opponents of the project assert that an effort should be made to locate such a massive development on desert property that has already been developed or "disturbed." Proponents point out that doing as the environmentalists request would put the facility much closer to existing populated areas where residents have already made vociferous and successful protest to the proposed placement of other less expansive solar projects. Proponents also dispute the assertion that the project site is truly "undisturbed."

Already, the Soda Mountain Solar power project has been scaled back from the 358-megawatt output facility originally proposed in 2007, and it will exist on 790 fewer acres than the even-larger design propounded by its original proponent, New York-based Caithness Corporation, which had requested a 2,557-acre footprint within a larger 4,179-acre zone of exclusive occupation.

The initial project proposal came toward the end of the George W. Bush Administration. When Barack Obama became president, there was indication that the Soda Mountain project would be fast tracked for approval as a renewable energy project. But the prioritization lagged when during the federal scoping process, the potential that the project would compromise the habitat of the big horn sheep that wander in that neck of the desert was raised.

The Bechtel Corporation two generations ago was headed by former Atomic Energy Commission Chairman/CIA Director John McCone. In conjunction with its corporate affiliate, Soda Mountain Solar LLC, Bechtel acquired the project from the Caithness Corporation. Under the National Environmental Protection Act, Bechtel at first proceeded with pushing the project application, as originally proposed, to a conclusion, seeking a right-of-way grant from the Bureau of Land Management for approximately 4,179 acres, within which the 2,557-acre expanse of the solar plant, as then planned, was to be built. Following final engineering and micro-siting of the project, a project evaluation determined that there would be areas within the originally proposed project footprint that would remain undisturbed and not within fenced areas to be included in the right-of-way grant. In addition to the right-of-way grant, a land use plan amendment was also required to identify the site in the California Desert Conservation Area Plan of 1980. Under the dual restrictions outlined in the California Desert Conservation Area Plan and the National Environmental Protection Act, reductions in the scope of the project were made. These changes resulted in the 358-megawatt output originally envisaged for the project being downscaled to 287 megawatts and the project size being lessened to 1,767 acres.

In early April, the U.S. Department of the Interior announce it had given go-ahead to the project, with Assistant Secretary for Land and Minerals Management Janice Schneider having signed a record of decision with regard to the undertaking on March 28, 2016.

That approval came after a somewhat tortuous two-year process, during which the application with the Department of the Interior triggered objections from a multitude of parties, including some environmentalists, desert recreation and off-road enthusiasts, national park users, scientists, former Interior Department employees and local land and business owners. In addition, the National Park Service urged denial of the project. Collectively, they petitioned the Interior Department 17 months ago to designate the Soda Mountains an area of critical environmental concern, a categorization that would have prevented the project from proceeding. Opponents of the project, which as currently proposed is to be spread over more than four square miles, say it will industrialize important habitat for bighorn sheep, burrowing owls, desert kit foxes, desert tortoises, Mojave fringe-toed lizards, golden eagles and other wildlife, less than half a mile from the Mojave National Preserve. Theresa Pierno, president and CEO of National Parks Conservation Association, called the approval "an incredibly disappointing move" which contradicted the Obama Administration's commitment "to protect and connect important landscapes" within "designated national monuments in the California desert." The project's approval, she said, "fails to abide by the Interior Department's pledge to balance energy development with the protection of special places. We will continue to fight this decision and work to protect this pristine, beautiful, wildlife-rich landscape." A Bureau of Land Management document, however, propounded that the project fulfilled ecological goals. "The Bureau of Land Management's purpose and need for the project is to respond to the applicant's application under Title V of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act for a right-of-way grant to construct, operate, maintain, and commission a solar photovoltaic facility on public lands in compliance with the Federal Land Policy and Management Act Bureau of Land Management regulations, and other applicable federal laws. In accordance with Section 103(c) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act (43 USC §1702(a)), public lands are to be managed for multiple uses that take into account the long-term needs of future generations for renewable and non-renewable resources. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to grant rights-of-way on public lands for systems of generation, transmission, and distribution of electric energy (43 USC §1761(a)(4))." Assistant Secretary for Land and Minerals Management Janice Schneider emphasized that the project will go a good distance toward meeting President Obama's Climate Action Plan goal of 20,000 megawatts (MW) of power derived from renewable energy projects on public lands by 2020, while avoiding destruction of hitherto undisturbed land.

While project opponents maintain the project site is a pristine expanse of the desert, Schneider said, "The Soda Mountain Solar Project is to be located in an area of disturbed lands that include Interstate 15 and an active utility corridor for oil and gas pipelines, electricity transmission and communication lines and facilities. Adjacent to the site is the corridor for the approved and yet to be constructed high speed rail route between Los Angeles and Las Vegas. The facility is also proximate to the Razor Off Highway Vehicle Area."

Bechtel, which was instrumental in obtaining the federal permits and entitlement to proceed with the project, has now handed the project off to another Bay Area company, Regenerate Power.

Though the property upon which the solar facility is to be built is federal land and the Department of the Interior had certified the project under the National Environmental Protection Act, the federal processes are not the final word on the permitting of the project.

It is this need for meeting the State of California's environmental certification requirements, which is to be processed at the county level, which offers project opponents a last ditch opportunity to stop the project.

It is projected that a solar project the size of that proposed for Soda Mountain would utilize as much as 2,000 acre feet of water during construction, and will require over 40 acre feet of water a year for solar panel washing. Thus, a deep on-site well will have to be sunk. The County of San Bernardino has jurisdiction to grant permits for on-site wells. The San Bernardino County Department of Public Health/Division of Environmental Health Services evaluates the criteria related to well permits.

For full and final approval, the project further needs to be certified as being in compliance with the California Environmental Quality Act. The county is also the lead agency for compliance with that act, known by its acronym CEQA. The county's Land Use Services division is the entity charged with doing CEQA analyses. Like the Department of Public Health, Land Use Services does an analysis and makes a recommendation to the county board of supervisors. Thus, it is the board of supervisors which will actually vote on the well permits and acceptance of the environmental impact report registering compliance with California Environmental Quality Act requirements.

The county is scheduled to make a consideration of the Soda Mountain Solar Project during a public hearing before the board of supervisors at that body's August 23 meeting. While the staff report to the board will not be available until approximately 3 p.m. on the August 19, the Friday prior to the Tuesday meeting, the Sentinel has learned that the board will be given recommendations to approve the well permit and certify the CEQA environmental report.

County spokesperson David Wert told the Sentinel this week "The Department of Public Health/Division of Environmental Health Services is recommending approval of the well permits." Moreover, Wert said, "Land Use Services will recommend certification of the environmental impact report, but keep in mind that certification of an environmental impact report is not a statement that a project is environmentally sound. It is merely a determination that the contents of the EIR and the process for completing the environmental impact report comply with the requirements of CEQA."

It thus appears that the project will likely be given go-ahead. The only prospect for the project being blocked is that its opponents might prevail on First District Supervisor Robert Lovingood, in whose district the project is located, to vote against the well permit approval and CEQA certification. Lovingood's rejection of the project, coupled with his ability to persuade his board colleagues to back him in that opposition with regard to a decision impacting the jurisdiction he represents, might result in the project being halted. Nevertheless, with Bechtel, one of the country's leading engineering and construction companies, behind the project and the federal government likewise favoring it, the prospect that county officials will defy those forces to block the project appears dim.

David Lamfrom, who is active in the National Parks Conservation Association, told the Sentinel that he views the upcoming board of supervisors' vote as "a much more complicated issue than the approval of a well permit. There are multiple issues related to the county's vote on the CEQA matter. There are significant impacts to be brought up in the [environmental impact] statement the county will need to deal with. The question is: 'Will the project proponent be able to mitigate those impacts?' If those mitigation measures are found to be insufficient, the county could still make and residential urban zones, such that the zoning, general plan and development code amendments were required because of the conversion of the property to a residential social service zone that would involve an increase in density envisioned on property that would otherwise be host to approximately four single family dwelling units per acre. Mujica said facility would employ approximately 39 staff members.

Mujica repeated his recommendation offered at the July 18 meeting that the project be approved.

"This is not an overnight stay kind of place," said Mujica. "It is not a soup kitchen. It is a place where those who need can come here, get assimilated back to society, learn how to take care of themselves and slowly over a 12 to 18 month period learn to be back on their feet again."

After Mayor Carey Davis deferred to Valdivia, as both mayor pro tem and the councilman in whose district the project was proposed, to moderate the council's discussion, Valdivia initially sought to provide an appearance of non-commitment with regard to the project, making no direct or overt indication of his opposition to the project, though there were subtle suggestions he had concerns about it when he said, "This item certainly does impact upon Third Ward neighborhoods... affecting the quality of life. At the very outset I would like to suggest the quality of life with this project would be impacting local neighborhoods... impacting neighborhoods, residents and certainly businesses in the Third Ward, specifically along the Mt. Vernon and Walnut Corridor and Muscott and Rialto Avenue Area."

At that point, he gave the floor to councilman Henry Nickel, who inveighed against the project proposal. On July 18, Nickel had emphasized his belief that the project should be denied because it did not fit within what he characterized as the city's inexact, disjointed, inconsistent and unclear strategy in dealing with the homeless, that included the city's funding or a homeless resource center. Nickel did not, precisely, rehash that line of argument in depth, but broadened his rejection of the project.

Nickel noted that as currently designated, the 11.02 acres upon which project was to be constructed is divided into 55 parcels, the owners of each of which bear a $148 tax burden pursuant the annexation of the entire city into a county fire service district coinciding with the county fire department assuming fire protection service in the city and the dissolution of the city's 137-year-old municipal fire department earlier this year. As a consequence of the development, the 55 parcels would be, Nickel said, "consolidated into four sites," reducing the number of parcels against which the $148 assessments are being charged by a whopping 51. Nickel said the entire city had undergone "annexation into a fire zone, including a parcel tax to distribute the burden of fire service ideally equitably throughout the city on the basis of parcels." He suggested "it is not equitable" to be "subsidizing this on the basis of public safety on the backs of other property owners." Mary's Mercy Home would, he said, eventually be "housing over 100 individuals demanding public safety services more than other residents of the city."

Nickel continued, "Underlying that, San Bernardino bears the burden six times more than any other city in terms of homeless." He cited statistics in asserting that providing help to the homeless resulted in attracting more homeless. He said that between 2013 and 2015 the number of homeless in San Bernardino increased by six percent. "The city is unduly bearing the burden of homelessness," Nickel said, such that the number of the county's total homeless living in San Bernardino has "jumped from 39 to 45 percent." Denying approval of Mary's Mercy House was "fair and equitable to the City of San Bernardino in the context of all cities in the county having shifted the burden of homelessness to San Bernardino."

Nickel had been one of the two votes against the project on July 18. He had been joined at that time by councilwoman Bessine Richard. Richard did not recede from her position.

"I support Mary's Mercy House," Richard said. "They do a wonderful job, but I don't support it being in San Bernardino. We talk about services being free. Nothing in life is free. Once we open this, 118 more people are going to flock here because we have the resources. We are the city with resources. We have to stop being the one that provides so much resources to where we bring them all to San Bernardino. Yes, [this would] supply a permanent support of housing to the homeless but... I don't think this is anything that is going to help our city because we have to grow. Think of the businesses that we are going to lose in the community. That is going to effect that part of the town."

Three of the four members of the council who supported the project on July 18, Fred Shorett, Virginia Marquez and Jim Mulvihill, reiterated their support of the project, in so doing countering Nickel's argument that the project was inconsistent with the city's ongoing efforts to deal with its homeless problem. Shorett, Marquez and Mulvihill asserted that the project was one that would make a meaningful and substantial inroad against the homeless problem the city faces and that their colleagues should not blur the distinction between it and other less effective homeless relief efforts.

"This is an opportunity to pick away at that homeless number," Shorett said. "This is not a soup kitchen. This is working toward a solution of this horrendous homeless problem we have in our community. This is a very good start. I think it is a good project. We should take a good look at it."

Shorett said he believed those angling to keep the project from coming to fruition were citing "reasons I can't

Marquez said "I continue to wholeheartedly support this."

She then took issue with Valdivia's suggestion that allowing the project to proceed would reduce the quality of life in the neighborhood around the project site.

"Talk about quality of life," Marquez said. "What is there now is the site of an illegal dump." With regard to the project itself, Marquez said, "Is it perfect? No, but it is part of the solution."

Councilman Mulvihill said, "Homelessness is a very touchy issue in our city, as councilman Nickel has pointed out, but his is not temporary housing. This is not enabling. This is not a soup kitchen. This is a relatively long term solution to the problem. It is taking people in, establishing some stability in their lives, and then providing case management to take care of the issues that created the chronic homelessness. We're not dealing with the short term. We're dealing with chronic homelessness, people who have addictions, people with psychotic issues or combinations of the two. It has been estimated at the national level that the cost of homelessness on local jurisdictions is anywhere from $35,000 to $125,000. This is not an enabling process. It is a process to cure the situation. A recent study published by the Department of Housing and Urban Development showed using just a housing first model reduced chronically homeless adults across the country by 25 percent.

Talk about an effective homeless reduction program: this is it. We don't have a strategic plan but the point is housing first will be the foundation for any strategic plan that we get. Housing first. What is second? For individuals to think about the future. They don't have to think about day-to-day survival. They can think about tomorrow. They can think about recontacting with their families, among other things. The point is also it is without cost to the city. Homelessness is a hot issue. You see the panhandlers. You see the transients. You see the tents down at the parks. This is not that. This is not enabling. This is the solution. It has been tried again and again, with success. It works and not in terms of temporary housing. It provides stability. It provides permanent housing for these individuals. You get the permanent housing. You get the case management. It is [focused on] the individual's development, and that is the difference."

In making his remarks, Councilman Valdivia abandoned any pretense of being undecided with regard to the project, making clear he would not support it. "When I do a simple calculation of the impact to the immediate area on the quality of life issue, my constant refrain is this does have an impact on public safety," he said.

Valdivia reiterated some of Nickel's and Richard's objections, saying he had come to the conclusion "that this is not equitable. It is not equitable to the other hardworking taxpayers in the community that have been burdened and shouldering this $148 parcel tax," suggesting that in reducing the 55 parcels on the 11.02-acre property to four recorded parcels "there is some inequality for the average taxpayer."

The purchaser shall have no further recourse against the beneficiary, the Trustor or the trustee. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 877-484-9942 or visit this Internet Web site www.USA-Foreclosure.com or www.Auction.com using the file number assigned to this case 7023.115729. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. ## County Pension System Misses Earnings Goal from page 5 ernmental entities contributed $303,080,000 to the association, the employees contributed $91,056,000 and the association earned $911,800,000 from its investments. In 2013-14, the county and the other 16 governmental entities contributed $330,330,000, the employees contributed $89,861,000 and the association earned $876,566,000 from its investments. In 2014-15, the county and the other 16 governmental entities contributed $315,240,000, the employees contributed $117,899,000 and the association earned $280,498,000 from its investments.

In recent years, county employees have been contributing more toward the pension fund than in year's past as the county's top administrator, Greg Devereaux, has pushed to decrease benefits to county workers as provided for in the county's collective bargaining agreements with employee unions.

Nevertheless, if the San Bernardino County Employee Retirement Association's investments continue to show lackluster earnings, county taxpayers will be called upon to pay more and more to sustain the pension system.

Questions have thus emerged about the soundness of the financial investment advice SBCERA has been receiving.

The association's investments are highly diversified in short term cash investment funds, emerging market debt, U.S. government securities, corporate bonds, foreign bonds, domestic common and preferred stock, foreign common and preferred stock, real estate, foreign and domestic alternatives. SBCERA also engages in security lending.

Adam Sands, the communications director for the San Bernardino County Employees Retirement Association, was philosophical about the losses the association sustained over the last fiscal year. "Our portfolio is not immune from global pressures," he said. "The market was down in many sectors and flat in others. We lost 1.1 percent. Moving forward, we are confident in our long term investment strategy."

Sands expressed faith "in the fund's investment allocations, as approved by the board of retirement. Like most investors, we would have preferred that Fiscal Year 2015-2016 yield a higher return for the portfolio, but we also maintain a long-term view and hold firm in our approach of focusing on stable, income-generating investments. Regarding specific asset classes that underperformed, emerging market equity and credit investments came under notable pressure during the past fiscal year. This, of course, also presents attractive buying opportunities as the fund remains committed to the investment target ranges."

Sands said, "Over the long run, approximately 70 percent of revenue comes from investment income, 25 percent from employer contributions and 5 percent from employee contributions. The exact revenue percentages from employer contributions, member contributions, and investment income vary each year depending on investment returns."

SBCERA is not the only nor the largest public employee retirement system in California. The California Public Employee Retirement System is the largest such system in the state, overseeing the pension accommodations for state government employees and a vast number of municipal employees. Known by its acronym, CalPERS, its investment pool too has had lackluster performance over the last several years, requiring that the state and the cities plug the pension funding gap.

While many public employees are well aware and focused on public retirement systems, how they are set up and guaranteed by the taxpayers and how those systems' investments fare yearly, the vast majority of average citizens are not. As more and more taxpayer a statement or finding of overriding considerations and let the project proceed.”

Such a course of action by the county, Lam-from said, is fraught with consequences.

“If the county does certify the environmental impact report and the mitigation measures as sufficient, it will take on the liability that represents,” Lamfrom said, essentially letting the federal government off the hook. “The Department of the Interior made its finding under NEPA [the National Environmental Protection Act], which is different from the CEQA. The BLM [Bureau of Land Management] received six letters from the Department of Fish & Game stating the mitigation measures proposed are not sufficient. It is not the Department of the Interior that will certify that the environmental process is complete. Instead, it is the county making that leap. This is an example of federal overreach that is putting the county in a bad position. The federal government will get the credit for a renewable energy project but the county will be left with the responsibility and any potential liability.”

Both Lamfrom and another project opponent, Jacob Overson, see in the current race for First District supervisor, an opportunity to sway First District Supervisor Robert Lovingood.

Overson pointed out that Lovingood is locked in a tight race against challenger Angela Valles, a former Victorville councilwoman. Overson, who is the manager of the Baker Community Services District, has personally called upon Lovingood and the other San Bernardino County supervisors to oppose the Soda

SB Council Reverses Itself On Homeless Facility Permit

Valdivia propounded his belief that the project was good neither for the city as a whole nor the Third Ward. “Third ward residents... have already been burdened with one less fire station that closed in October of 2014,” he said, decrying “the idea that more residents, 118 residents, may have the potential of calling 911 for services and impacting the other area residents that are not in favor of this. [That] they're going to have to wait additional time for a fire truck or police personnel to respond to their medical or police issue is disturbing. This closure of the fire station at Mill and Arrowhead has already impacted the response times in my district. I can't support this. It seems completely incompatible with the priorities I share in my district.”

With regard to the overarching impact on the city as a whole, Valdivia raised the specter of an effective program serving to attract other homeless people. “The third issue I have is the magnet effect,” Valdivia said. “This certainly will have a more inviting welcoming effect for other homeless individuals in our region to come to have resources in our community.”

And Valdivia said he was against the project because it did not represent a robust boost to the local economy. “The fourth point is: What about true rooftops?” Valdivia said. “I don't consider this build a true rooftop. When I look at the expansive acreage of about ten acres of land, imagine the possibilities for true rooftops to be built. We have this presupposed idea that rooftops would add to the economic resurgence of this community. This mammoth rooftop does not address my concerns on the economic development of this city. It doesn't provide any economic growth opportunities or job creations and it certainly does not coincide with my priorities on economic development. I cannot support this. This is inconsistent and incompatible with the needs of the community.”

Dramatically, it was councilman Benito Barrios who spoke last before the vote was taken. With three of his colleagues lined up in favor of the project and three against it, his decision to stand by his vote from two weeks previous or reverse himself represented the swing vote with regard to the fate of the project.

Barrios did not waste time or words in indicating he was going to change his position and crush the hopes and expectations of the project's proponents and supporters.

“When I last voted on this, I was very much on the fence on which way to go because I see the bigger picture, both negative and positive impacts, this could have on our community,” Barrios said. “I'm leaning toward not supporting this today because we have to look toward the future. I think we still have to work out some of the kinks to make this work. This solution, our strategy, all of this needs to be talked about. Today, I'm not going to support it.”

The project failed to gain the needed four votes.

After the vote, the Sentinel asked Barrios if the presence of Valdivia at the meeting and his expression of objection to the project had influenced his change of vote. He said, “That did not change my vote. Of greater concern to me was that after the last meeting, I was approached by several of my constituents who told me, 'We don't want this. What kind of impact is this going to have on our city?’”

Barrios pointed out that he had sought on July 18 to ascertain whether the project would have the effect of creating a net gain or loss of homeless in San Bernardino.

“I asked for numbers on what the attrition rate from their program is,” Barrios said. “They did not know what the attrition rate is or at least they did not give it to me. I wanted to know what happens to the people who don't make it through the program. I wanted to know if that [those dropping out of the program] was a significant number. The aftermath of that attrition has a cost for the city. If this [the project] comes back in the future, maybe they can resolve those concerns.”

The proponents' failure to answer his question about the attrition rate, Barrios indicated, left him inclined to accept Nickel's, Richard's and Valdivia's assertions that the project would have a magnet effect and attract more homeless to the city. “What kind of impacts are we creating with these programs?” Barrios asked. “We have to cut the lifeline to these homeless programs at some point,” he said.

City manager Mark Scott signaled during the discussion that the city would soon take up the subject of formalizing the consistent and ordered response to the homeless issue that Nickel had constantly alluded to. Scott told the Sentinel such a workshop would be scheduled within 45 days.

Mountain Solar Project. "Soda Mountain Solar has been forced on the county and local communities by outside interests seeking their own political and financial goals, while we deal with the environmental consequences," Overson said. "San Bernardino County Supervisor Lovingood and the rest of the board of supervisors have a chance to support a more sensible renewable energy policy by rejecting Soda Mountain Solar's well water permit." Overson said of Lovingood, "It looks like he is against it, but it's hard to say."

Overson maintains he is not alone in importuning Lovingood to reject the project proposal, and gas line, the water from which was disposed of in unlined trenches in the Mojave Desert northwest of Barstow.

In the Victor Valley, contaminants from now-shuttered George Air Force Base – including the solvent trichlorethylene, pesticides, asbestos and radioactive materials – are migrating into the water table next to the Mojave River.

In northern Rialto, perchlorate – a substance known to wreak havoc on the thyroid gland and lungs – has formed a plume in the water table directly beneath a host of industrial operations that used the substance in the 1940s, 1950s, 1960s and 1970s, and is migrating toward adjoining water basins.

that given the degree of lobbying against the project that has gone on at a grassroots level he believes Lovingood understands that approving the project could jeopardize his reelection.

Lamfrom expressed hope rather than confidence such a message had been received and understood by Lovingood.

"This has become a politically charged local issue," Lamfrom said. "I don't know how the votes will line up, though." He did say that he believes Lovingood's decision on the matter, since the project is within his district, will likely influence the other members of the board. In this way, Lamfrom said, the election represents a hammer that might render the approval/disapproval process for the project malleable.

Spreading Dogbane Apocynum Androsaemifolium

Apocynum androsaemifolium, a flowering plant in the Gentianales order known by the common names fly-trap dogbane or spreading dogbane is seen at various spots in the San Bernardino Mountains.

Growing to a maximum of roughly two-and-a-half feet high, Apocynum androsaemifolium is a widely branching, bushy, perennial plant. The spreading dogbane's leaf margin is entire and leaf venation is alternate, that is, with opposite, oval leaves. It sports small groups of tiny bell-shaped flowers that are white or pink externally and striped inside with deeper pink. The flowers appear terminally, i.e., near the branch tips.

The flowers' fragrance is reminiscent of lilac. Apocynum androsaemifolium has branching stems, hairs on the underside of the leaves, and no hair on the stems. Milky juice exudes from broken stems and leaves.

The plant is poisonous, due to the cardiac glycosides it contains.

These plants are relatives of the milkweeds. Indian Hemp (A. cannabinum), a slightly smaller species with erect clusters of greenish-white flowers, is also found in fields and is poisonous. Claspingleaved Dogbane (A. sibiricum), found widely throughout the Northeast in sandy or gravelly habitats such as stream banks, has stalkless or nearly stalkless leaves.

Spreading dogbane is a showy member of the dogbane family (Apocynaceae) that is found in nearly all of the 50 states except some in the southeast. The common name, dogbane, and the genus name, "Apocynum," meaning "away from dog," are testaments to the toxic nature of this plant, not only to dogs, but to humans, livestock, and other mammals as well.

Lovingood is leaning with respect to the issue. "He hasn't made any decision that I know of," Holland said.

Adriane Wodey of Soda Mountain Solar said the expressions of concern about the unsuitability of the site for a solar plant are misplaced, that the project will not represent an ecological threat, and that the site is relatively devoid of species of any sort, let alone endangered ones, which would be put at risk by the project.

"The project site does not have high concentrations or major populations of species," Wodey

The red stem branches multiple times, giving it a wide-spreading appearance. The leaves lining each branch droop down. The flowers are small, at just over a quarter inch wide. Each flower produces two slender pods that release numerous small seeds tipped by a tuft of cottony hairs that aid in wind dispersal. Spreading dogbane, as the name suggests, tends to spread from underground rhizomes and form distinct patches. Although it is native to North America, in some areas it is considered a nuisance weed.

Spreading dogbane is found in a variety of habitats, from native plant communities to weedy roadsides and waste areas. The flowers produce nectar that is an important food source for insects, most notably the monarch butterfly. In fact, the milkweed family, host plant for monarchs, and the dogbane family are closely related. Once thought to be a larval food for Monarch butterflies, research has shown that while adult female Monarchs will occasionally oviposit on this species, their offspring will not mature on it.

If you break a spreading dogbane stem or leaf, you will see that the plant contains a bitter, sticky, milky white sap. The sap contains cardiac glycosides that are toxic to humans. The root also contains a potent cardiac stimulant, cymarin. These toxic compounds help protect spreading dogbane from grazing animals. Despite its toxicity, the plant has been used medicinally for a variety of ailments. This plant is enjoyed for its beauty and is of limited utility as a medicine. Native Americans used the tough fibers of this and other native dogbanes to make threads and cord.

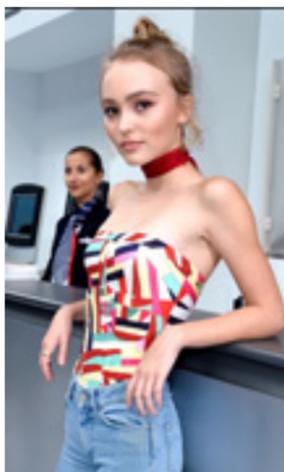

The project site does not support high concentrations of sensitive or other biological resources. The project site exhibits low biological sensitivity and should not be designated as a moderate biological sensitivity area. The project site is highly affected by the presence of I-15 and the existing intensive land uses within the area. The project site exhibits fewer siting constraints than most sites previously approved or currently under consideration by the BLM for solar development in California."

County Pension System Misses Earnings Goal from page 17

money is being diverted from providing standard public services to covering pension debt, however, awareness of the circumstance is growing and resentment toward public employees within the general population is manifesting. That well-spring of resentment has yet to result in pressure on elected officials to discontinue what are increasingly perceived as overly generous benefits and pensions to government workers, though political observers have projected that such pressure will mount to the point where some level of adjustment is likely to occur within half a decade. Advocates for public employees maintain that the state's various governments are contractually bound to honor the pension commitments made to public employees and that no degree of public resentment will endanger the pensions of current employees, though government employees in the future may see the benefits that were available to their older colleagues taken away from them.

Under public pension systems, the amount paid retirees is calculated on the basis of their highest salaries, such that many mid-level and higher public employees in retirement receive pensions that are well beyond the amount of money earned on a yearly basis by the vast majority of workers in the private sector. Several hundred retired public employees in San Bernardino County receive pensions of over $100,000 per year. Several dozen retired employees in San Bernardino County receive pensions of over $200,000 per year.

Sands told the Sentinel those pensions will never be taken away or reduced. "SBCERA members can continue to count on a consistent lifetime monthly pension benefit, with continuance options for beneficiaries, based on their age at retirement, years of service credit, benefit formula and final average compensation," he said.

In addition to the County of San Bernardino, the Barstow Fire Protection District, the California Electronic Recording Transaction Network Authority, the California State Association of Counties, the City of Big Bear Lake, the City of Chino Hills, the Crestline Sanitation District, the Department of Water & Power of the City of Big Bear Lake, the Hesperia Recreation and Park District, the Inland Library System, the Law Library for San Bernardino County, the Local Agency Formation Commission, the Mojave Desert Air Quality Management District, San Bernardino Associated Governments, the South Coast Air Quality Management District, and the Superior Court of California, County of San Bernardino and all of their employees, as well as the employees of SBCERA itself are participants in the San Bernardino County Employees' Retirement Association.

Brendan Brandt, an attorney and former Upland city councilman, is the president of the SBCERA Board of Retirement. He told the Sentinel that the association's failure to reach its earnings goal in 2014-15 and its loss of investment capital last year was a consequence of general "pessimism" that had beset the financial markets in that time frame and was not a reflection of any inherent failure on the part of SBCERA, its management or financial advisers. He said the San Bernardino County Employees Retirement System's "portfolio is incredibly diverse and extensive" and that it was being "prudently managed. We have a staff and independent advisers who make recommendations to the board. We are constantly looking at a whole host of classes and mixes of investments and securities. We are invested in stocks, bonds, real estate and debt."

Brandt said that fluctuations in the market were par for the course, but that the association's long term strategy was a patient and sound one. He said as the economy goes, so go the association's assets. He said that temporary downturns were to be expected but "a retirement system is there for the long haul and the wisdom of the course you set and stick with isn't something you can judge at a quick glance at any given time. It is something that becomes apparent over a number of years."
