

San Bernardino County Supervisors Criminalize Sidewalk Camping

The San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors this week gave preliminary passage to an ordinance prohibiting camping on sidewalks. On August 19, the board members made no comment in approving making it a civil infraction to camp on, sleep on or otherwise remain overnight on public sidewalks within the unincorporated areas of the county. The ordinance imposes fines of $100 for a first offense, $200 for a second, and going up to $500 for subsequent offenses. Left unclear is how the county intends to keep track of individuals cited, as the homeless sometimes lack identification and do not have any ties to a specific address. The ordinance, listed on the agenda as item 72, defined camping as setting up or occupying a temporary structure or erecting a temporary shelter for the purpose of sleeping, staying, living, and violating the ordinance and thereby impeding public access to sidewalks, highways, trails, and public facilities. The ordinance further prohibits storing or using personal property in the same spaces. The board of supervisors is scheduled to revisit the matter and give the ordinance a second reading, that is a final approval, on September 9. In the staff report for the item, Community Development and Housing Department Director Carrie Harmon sought to provide a high-minded justification for what at least some others see as a low-minded and cruel practice of bullying those unfortunate enough to occupy the lowest strata within the region's economic scale. "With the county's passage of the $72 million Homeless Initiatives Spending Plan in March 2023 and the establishment of the Board of Supervisor's Homelessness Ad Hoc Committee, the county has taken substantive steps to address homelessness centered around the expansion of shelter beds and permanent supportive housing infrastructure," Harmon wrote. "Specific investments include: 1) the establishment See P 2

Haro Parents Arrested And Charged With Murdering Son

The case of the disappearance of 7-month-old Emmanuel Haro over the last seven days has taken a series of wicked turns, culminating in the arrest this morning of both of his parents on murder charges. Despite the emergence of information that has thrown Rebecca Haro's original account of her son's August 14 kidnapping into progressively greater doubt, certainty about the infant's fate and precisely how that came about remains elusive, despite the definitive action by the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department.

There are, as far as the public is concerned, multiple vagueries and unknowns in the case. That is partly an outgrowth of the investigative process in which information by authorities is being deliberately withheld to deny a suspect or suspects knowledge that might assist them in hiding or destroying evidence or materials related to the crime. Sheriff's department investigators also acknowledged that some key facts, details and specifics are unknown to them, as when they stated after the arrests that Emmanuel's body has yet to be located.

According to Rebecca Haro, between 7:40 p.m and 7:50 p.m. on August 14, the child had been forcibly taken from her by a man who approached her from behind as she was changing Emmanuel's diaper on the passenger side of the family's vehicle while parked in the parking lot of the Big 5 Sporting Goods store in Yucaipa. She had been knocked unconscious and fell to See P 2

Governor Newsom's Gerrymander Vote To Cost At Least $22M In SBC County Alone

SACRAMENTO—Pressed by Governor Gavin Newsom and other state and national Democratic leaders, the California Legislature on Thursday, August 21 agreed to schedule a special election in November at which they anticipate California voters will approve the redrafting of the state's electoral lines. The Democratic members of both legislative houses in the state's capital, who comprise a supermajority in both bodies, willingly went along with Newsom's intention to present the voters with a map of Congressional districts calculated to result in five of the nine California Congressional seats now held by Republicans falling into the hands of Democrats during the 2026 mid-term election. The special election will cost California taxpayers at least $235 million to hold and could run to as much as $260 million. San Bernardino County's share of that burden will be at least $22 million, according to estimates, and could reach $25 million. At present, Democrats lopsidedly outnumber Republicans in California's 52-member Congressional delegation 432-to-9. That is a reflection of the degree to which California leans leftward politically. Of California's total 23,206,519 registered voters, 10,396,792 or 44.8 percent are Democrats, while 5,896,203 or 25.41 percent are Republicans. Those who have no party affiliation number 5,336,441 or 23 percent, a number not terribly far off from that of the Republicans. The remaining 1,577,083 voters or 6.8 percent are members of the American Independent, Green, Libertarian, Peace & Freedom or other more obscure parties. Despite comprising more than one-quarter of the state's voters, the Republicans hold nine of the See P 3

Twentynine Palms' Accommodation Of Ofland Resort Earns City Environmental Certification Lawsuit

The Twentynine Palms City Council's decision last month to utilize a far less exacting environmental certification process than it could have when it gave approval to the Ofland resort in the community's Indian Cove District has triggered a lawsuit challenging the project altogether.

Houston, Texas-based Ofland, headed by Charles Tate and Luke Searcy, on July 22 obtained the city council's approval to build 100 guest cabins and 25 units of employee housing along with two lodges, a swimming pool and spas, recreational areas, playgrounds, restaurants and a bar on 42 acres at the center of a 152-acre site. The council's action came after the planning commission on June 25 made a non-binding recommendation that the city council give go-ahead to the project. At both the planning commission and city council hearings for the undertaking, there were significantly more resi-

Morales Leaving As Cal State University San Bernardino President After 13 Years

In the 51st year of his career in higher education, and his 13th year as president of California State University, San Bernardino President Tomás D. Morales has informed students and faculty that he will step down from the post at the end of the 2025-26 academic year. Morales' retirement decision comes in the 51st year of his career in higher education and his 13th year as president of CSUSB. The announcement was made at the university's annual Convocation of faculty, staff and administrators on Thursday, August 21. Having given a synopsis of recent accomplishments at the university and the challenges of the new academic year, Morales said, "It has been the honor of a lifetime to serve as your president. And I look forward to moving into this next year with you." He said he took genuine pride in the institution, adding "these are not just words. They are what I truly feel and believe — and I have a great deal of confidence in you and the future of our campus." Morales began his role as CSUSB's fourth presi-

County Gives Go-Ahead To Yet Another Hinkley Solar Plant

The San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday, August 19, 2025 gave unanimous approval to an industrial-scale solar project to be constructed in the virtually abandoned community of Hinkley in the western portion of the county's Mojave Desert. The project applicant, Overnight Solar LLC., which operates an existing solar generating facility on an adjoining property, had sought a conditional use permit to construct and operate a 150-megawatt photovoltaic solar facility, and 150-megawatt battery energy storage system on approximately 596 acres within an 822-acre parcel located at 41650 Lockhart See P 3 of the $40 million Housing Development Grant Fund; 2) investing $70 million in Pacific Village Campus Phase II, which upon completion will provide 58 units of permanent supportive housing, 32 recuperative care beds, and 16 substance abuse treatment beds; and 3) the acquisition of two motels that upon conversion will provide 50 units of permanent supportive housing for encampment residents and 130 beds of interim housing for homeless patients exiting care at Arrowhead Regional Medical Center [the main campus of the county hospital].”

Harmon continued, “Building upon these capital investments, the county is taking unprecedented steps to reduce homelessness by implementing a coordinated, multi-agency response that prioritizes getting individuals off the streets and connected to housing and appropriate supportive services.

Multidisciplinary teams have been deployed that conduct outreach in encampments, provide case management, behavioral health support, transportation, and assistance with obtaining identification and public benefits. These efforts are paired with the ongoing expansion of shelter capacity and permanent housing resources to ensure that enforcement actions are grounded in compassion and aimed at long-term stability. The ultimate goal is to transition people out of environments that may be unsafe from both a public health and safety standpoint, while also protecting the well-being of county residents as a whole.”

Harmon continued, “The proposed ordinance addresses camping on County public property and County public rights of way and is specifically focused on mitigating public health and safety concerns. Adoption of the ordinance will be a critical first step in the County's proactive approach to encampment abatement, in alignment with Executive Order N-1-24 issued by Governor Gavin Newsom on July 25, 2024. Executive Order N-1-24 encourages local governments to adopt policies and to use all available resources and infrastructure, including resources provided by the State of California's historic investments in housing and intervention programs, to take action to humanely remove encampments from public spaces. The number of encampments on public property have increased across the county due to a rise in homelessness over previous years. These encampments pose significant public health and safety risks to residents, including those living within the encampments, and the environment. The impacts include increased fire hazards, accumulation of waste, and loss of life from exposure to the elements. The proposed ordinance will facilitate the abatement of encampments that most threaten the life, health, and safety of those around them.”

By citing them and jailing the county's homeless population and then saddling them with fines that are heftier than what they have money to pay, Harmon said, the county is not hurting them but helping them.

“To fully address the impact of these encampments, county departments are committed to supporting encampment residents as they transition into shelter and housing, thereby reducing homelessness and the likelihood of new encampments being established,” she said.

There were more than a dozen county residents who disagreed, saying so to the board of supervisors as they considered and just before they voted on the introduction of the ordinance adding a chapter to the San Bernardino County Code, relating to camping on public property and obstructing public rights of way.

the ground, she said. Upon coming to, she said, her baby was gone. Lending credibility to her story was that her right eye had been blackened.

Less than 48 hours later, after an intense effort by the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department in the immediate aftermath of the kidnapping report to find the child or a vehicle matching the description of the one driven by Rebecca Haro's alleged assailant, a statement attributed to an anonymous investigator with the sheriff's department pointed toward “inconsistencies” in Rebecca Haro's statements to them.

This provoked among local social media some hints and subtle suggestions that there was something amiss with the case, and it fueled heightened efforts by a host of amateur local sleuths who had already undertaken a close examination of the kidnapping story to make more inquiries. Social media and internet postings, which already included hints and subtle suggestions that the Rebecca and her husband, Jake, had something to do with the child's disappearance, escalated into more pointed accusations that the story told by Emmanuel's parents was an outright fabrication intended to hide a far more sinister circumstance when another media report that Rebecca Haro was no longer cooperating with the sheriff's department investigators. I would take another three days before it emerged that the lack of cooperation consisted of her refusal to submit to a polygraph examination.

Over the next five days, local observers, social media near and far and then media nationwide and across the globe broke into a frenzied cacophony that virtually indicted both parents in the presumed death of their child, based upon what were largely secondhand or third-hand unverified recitations of what had been learned by residents of Yucaipa, residents of Cabazon, the community where the Haro's resided and residents of nearby Redlands who had curiosity about the case.

A woman in Yucaipa said she had learned from Big Five employees that the Haros had come into the business, inquiring about security cameras in the parking lot and area surrounding the store.

Some Yucaipa residents reported that video footage from a security camera at a liquor store across the street from the Big 5 showing what had occurred in the Big 5 parking lot on August 14, in which Rebecca Haro fell to the ground but which did not depict anyone, including someone matching the description of the man who had allegedly knocked her out, anywhere around.

Video footage from an internal camera at the Baada clothing store next to the Big 5 which runs from 7:44 p.m. until 7:54 p.m. and offers a view of the parking lot does not show any action similar to that contained in Rebecca Haro's recounting of the kidnapping.

On Monday, August 18, the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department put out a statement that “foul play” could not be ruled out in the case. A department spokeswoman refused to elaborate any further.

A Cabazon-based videographer/influencer, Ahmed Bellozo, said he had back-traced the Haros' movements to August 3, and that they had been at Waterman Discount Mall in San Bernardino on that date, at which time her right eye was already blackened.

On Saturday, those who were hoping that the unfolding events might have a joyful resolution were heartened at the possible sighting of the child in Bakersfield. That report did not pan out, however.

There was a rapid succession of events on Sunday, August 18. The San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department put out a statement that “foul play” could not be ruled out in the case. A department spokeswoman refused to elaborate any further.

Shortly thereafter, the news media learned that Emmanuel's 2-Year-old sibling had been removed from the Haros' custody.

Later on Sunday, there was an explosion of information with regard to the Haros that leapt across the planet they lead to a drastic decrease in the amount of taxpayer money spent on the utilization of emergency services, meaning expensive police calls, ambulance calls, and emergency room visits that do nothing but put a temporary band-aid on the problem. Riverside County Superior Court records showed that a conviction against Jake Mitchell Haro had been entered against him in June 2023, stemming from his arrest on charges of child cruelty in Hemet four years and 8 months previously.

On October 13, 2018, Haro and his then wife, Vanessa Avina, were arrested after their 10-week-old daughter, Carolina Rose, was admitted to Hemet Valley Hospital. According to Miguel Figueroa, the director of the county's land use services department, told the board of supervisors in a staff report retainment leading to the founding of the 501(c)(3) organization, Growing Inland Achievement, which has raised over $25 million toward this goal. Furthermore, under his watch, 552,612 gross square feet has been added to the San Bernardino and Palm Desert campuses.

Morales has spent the initial portion of his career working for the project that the project approval, if granted, would involve a policy plan amendment, a zoning amendment and the conditional use permit for both the erection of the facility and its eventual operation.

The solar field will consist of photovoltaic solar cells and will include a battery energy storage system on approximately 596 acres of an 822-acre parcel, including a 1.1-mile-long

State University of New York, the City University of New York and the California State University. Prior to coming to CSUSB, Morales was president of the College of Staten Island, The City University of New York (CUNY), from 2007 to 2012.

From 2001 to 2007, Morales served in various capacities at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona (CPP), including provost and vice president for academic affairs, vice president for student affairs, and professor of education. While at Cal Poly, he established the Kellogg Honors College, realigned the division of academic affairs and played a key role in completing a $23 million expansion of the Bronco Student Center, among other projects. Prior to joining Cal Poly Pomona, Morales served as vice president for student affairs and dean of students at The City College of New York (CUNY). A simple negative declaration is the least exacting type of development impact assessments and a mitigated negative declaration is the second-least stringent type of development impact assessments. On the other end of the scale, an environmental impact report is the most involved and exhaustive type of environmental analysis and certification there is, followed by an environmental impact study, then an environmental impact assessment, then a mitigated negative declaration and a negative declaration. An environmental impact report consists of an in-depth study of the project site, the project proposal, the potential and actual impacts the project will have on the site and surrounding area in terms of all conceivable issues, including land use, water use, air quality, potential contamination, noise, traffic, and biological and cultural resources. An environmental impact report specifies in detail what measures can, will and must be carried out to offset those impacts. An environmental impact study is somewhat less exacting and an environmental impact assessment is less stringent still. dents voicing opposition to Ofland's plan, which required a zone change from residential to tourist commercial, a general plan amendment and a conditional use permit to be allowed to proceed, than there were residents speaking in favor of it.

Under the California Environmental Quality Act, an examination of the environmental impacts of a project must be made. Some discretion is left to the governmental decision-making body that oversees land use issues and possesses approval and/or denial authority regard to a development project as to what type of analysis of the environmental issues is to be carried out and what mitigations of the impacts are to be required. In evaluating the project application thus far, Twentynine Palms plan-which was drawn up in 2021 based upon the 2020 U.S. Census's survey of California's population, has already been gerrymandered in favor of the Democratic Party. Mathematically, according to statisticians, based solely on the voter registration numbers throughout the state under the conventional model of a two-party political system that has prevailed in the United States for most of its history, 31 to 33 of the 52 members of California's Congressional delegation would be Democrats and 21 or 19 of them would be Republicans if the state's Congressional electoral map were unhindered by gerrymandering.

As it stands, under Proposition 20, which was passed by California's voters in 2010, congressional redistricting authority was transferred from the California State Legislature and the governor, which formerly allowed unbridled gerrymandering that favored whichever party happened to be in control in Sacramento at the time to occur, to a somewhat less-partisan California Citizens Redistricting Commission. That lessened, to a degree, the barefaced manipulation of the election district maps in California, though given the higher Democrat-to-Republican ratio in the Golden State generally, the maps drawn since then, particularly the districts created in 2021, give the Democrats an edge. One of the provisions of Proposition 20 was that if the governor or legislature want to re-assume redistricting authority, any redistricting they engage in must be approved by the state's voters.

That is precisely what Governor Newsom is seeking to do now.

Newsom's, and the Democrat's, inspirational for doing so is a reciprocal gerrymander orchestrated in the Lone State earlier this summer. Upon taking office in January, President Donald Trump initiated a whirlwind of policy changes which, while pleasing to his base, generated controversy and provided Democrats and other Trump critics with ammunition to attack him. This sparked concern over the prospect that the relatively thin margin of majority that the GOP holds in the House of Representatives – 220-to-215 – and in the U.S. Senate – 53-to-45, with two Independents – could be eradicated in the mid-term 2026 election. Political maps throughout all 50 states are traditionally redrawn the year following the decennial census, that being the year ending in 1, and are first employed in the year ending in 2. Generally, those maps pacts from the project will be mitigated or offset by the conditions of approval for the project. A negative declaration, the least exacting type of certification there is, merely states that the initial study done by the agency staff – in this case the county department of land use services – sufficiently identified any environmental issues and that there are no environmental problems of consequence involved in the proposed project. In remain effective for a decade. President Trump's political team undertook the rare, indeed virtually unheard of, tack of seeing which states, those being the ones where the Republicans were in ascendancy, might consider redrawing their congressional district lines mid-decade in a way that might ensure the election of a handful more Republicans, thus allowing the Republicans to keep their numerical edge in the lower legislative house. In Texas, Governor Greg Abbott signaled his willingness to redraw the state's 38 congressional districts in accordance with his fellow Republicans' re-total 52 House seats in California's congressional delegation, while the Democrats claim 43. In this way, California's electoral map has already been set so that the Republicans are represented at a rate in the House of Representatives - 17.31 percent - well below the 25.41 percent of the voters they constitute.

Thus, there is a widespread perception that the current California Congressional map, people has also seen it and recognizes the humanity of our homeless neighbors. They're not criminals, loiterers, or a problem that we need to sweep under the rug. They're people. They're battered women, senior citizens and even children. They're crying out for help. And rather than answering that call, we look to criminalize their existence. We propose to use more of our taxpayer dollars to bulldoze their temporary shelters, trash their personal belongings and throw them into jail cells when it would cost less money to actually help them. As great men before us have said, the test of a civilization is the way that it cares for its helpless members."

Fidel Chagoya, of San Bernardino who is involved in providing re-entry services to men and women being reintegrated into the community after having been incarcerated, said the homeless were already facing challenges in getting access to resources to assist themselves, and that creating a law that defines them as law-breakers was going to worsen an already-bad situation.

"Criminalizing and creating these ordinances would just lead to additional collateral consequences when folks do come home," Chagoya said. "Some of those consequences would be not being able to get housing, not being able to get employment. These are some of the things I have seen while working in re-entry. I am familiar with the barriers that come with living with a record today. That's why I'm here, to ask that you oppose agenda item 72, because it will do more harm than good for our folks out there, instead of getting them the resources that they need. So, how is that going to assist our folks that are unhoused? All it's going to do is criminalize them, keep them in the system. I think it costs over $13,000 to incarcerate an individual for a year."

Peggy Lee Kennedy said she was opposed to the concept of the "criminalization of unhoused people. What you're deciding to do will harm people."

According to the county's own statistics, Kennedy said, "44 percent of your count is chronically homeless. You don't get that number because you're doing a great job housing people. It's great that you're doing things and I applaud you for trying to assist people who are living outside and saying that you want to help, but making laws before you provide the solutions is cruel. It's just plain cruel. A huge percentage of the people that you criminalize are elderly. They are disabled people. In your count, you have 21 percent [of the county's homeless who] have mental health issues. I don't know how many people are actually disabled in that category. But physical disability is 22 percent of your count. That's a lot of people you want to criminalize with this law. So, if you look at such a huge number of people that are chronically homeless in this county that you've counted yourself, you can't sit there and pat your back, saying you're doing a great job and then make a law against being outside and think that's okay. It's harmful and it's wrong and it's inhumane. That's not what God told you to do. Jesus did not tell you to criminalize the poor."

Alice Herrera told the board, "Being unhoused should not be a crime. To arrest or institutionalize people for not having housing is cruel and inhumane. It also raises a lot of barriers for them to later gain housing, to get their life back on track. This is just another barrier to keep people down. You can't go and tell people that they need to clean up their act in order to have housing and then criminalize them for sleeping outside because they don't have housing."

Of citations, Herrera said, each one proves to be "a mark on your record. And each one of those citation is money that you don't have. If you can't pay that, then that's another citation into their system. Eventually, they'll tell you you need to go to jail because of these citations."

Teresa Willingham said, "I am a retired nurse. I've been a nurse for 30 years. I love San Bernardino County, and I love the effort that everybody's putting in to help the homeless. I seriously am committed to serving the homeless. They trust the government and they want to trust" that the government will help them, Willingham said. Nevertheless, she questioned whether the county with the ordinance it was contemplating was going to be of any assistance to them.

"In this situation, it's going to get worse, Willingham said. "It looks like we have to just really seriously think about where we putting our homeless population."

The system is challenged because the need overwhelms the resources to assist the homeless, with the prospect that the disparity will grow in the future, Willingham said.

"The need is so great and in the years that are going to come, it's going to be greater because we're releasing the children out on the street," Willingham said. "They have no place to go. They have no place to go. They have no families. They're laying on the sidewalk, they're kids, our kids that we love. This is our generation that's coming up and what are we doing? We're putting in citations, we're getting them put in jail. What we're saying is that they're homeless and they have to be off the street or else go to jail. Is that the way we want our life to go? Is that what we're looking for? Is that the kind of future we're going to have? So we need to really seriously think about the issue, increase the resources where they're needed, put the money where it's needed and make housing not only affordable but comfortable."

Desiree Sanchez, said that instead of criminalizing the county's homeless population, the board of supervisors should "instead offer permanent housing solutions medical, mental and recovery assistance to our unhoused neighbors struggling every day living outside in over 100 degree temperature."

Kristen Malabi said, "I am the care management supervisor for the only street medical team here in the Inland Empire. I am with the homeless community every day. Your community of seniors are living in our streets. Your community of disabled are also living in your streets. I see it every day. People don't want to be there People want to be inside. However, the options for being inside are practically non existent If you have some sort of standard for yourself."

In this regard Mulabi said, there are businesses and landlords that are exploiting their tenants to the point of violating the law and that no effort to prevent that abuse is being carried out by governmental authorities, who instead are now intent on creating a law to punish the victims of those unscrupulous entrepreneurs who have driven many people into homelessness.

"Your room and boards are charging people $900 a month with four people to a room, claiming that they feed them meals, if you consider a peanut butter and jelly sandwich a meal," Mulabi said. "You have room and boards that are infested with bed bugs and other things going on that can easily reinfect a patient who is being treated for open wounds, which most of your people are. Cellulitis is a number one thing that we see amongst most of your community not offered affordable housing. And when we say affordable, we mean affordable by percentage of someone's paycheck, not based off of a standard income. That doesn't work here. We have vets that only receive $1,100 a month for their service. I'm talking about veterans who have served. They are dying in our streets every day. We are the only medical team that treats here. Please hear us. The housing first model may work for some, but we do not have a mental institution. A lot of your community that people see on the streets confuse [drug] use for actually a mental condition. Please be aware of what's actually the facts of the community living on the street."

the case of Ofland, planning staff, the planning commission and the city council required nothing beyond the initial study to approve the project, which many in Twenty-nine Palms objected to.

Two groups, the Center for Biological Diversity and Indian Cove

Neighbors, believing the city cut corners in allowing Ofland to develop the property without undertaking an environmental impact report and making a finding that the conditions of approval ensured that any untoward impacts would be addressed, filed suit on August 20 in San Bernardino County Superior Court.

The plaintiffs asked the court to enjoin Ofland from proceeding with the project until the lawsuit is resolved. This is necessary, according to the legal team representing the Center for Biological Diversity, because the damage to both the habitat and migratory paths of six special-status wildlife species and five special-status plant species will occur during and after the construction phase of the project.

The suit does not petition for the abandonment of the project altogether, but seeks a court determination that a full environmental impact report for the project be completed, including the specification of mitigations, for the project to be allowed to proceed.

City staff's and Ofland's contention that there will be no serious or irreparable impacts on the species indigenous to the area if the company complies with the conditions of approval does not comport with reality according to the Center for Biological Diversity. The center's legal team characterizes those impacts as "significant." The property to be developed lies within a wildlife corridor that runs into Joshua Tree National Park, according to the plaintiffs. In addition, the vehicles that will transit the area will result in a deleterious effect on air quality, produce greenhouse gasses, result in nighttime light pollution and impacts on the quality of life of the residents of the Indian Cove, the suit proounds.

powerlines are proposed to be 95 feet in height which would normally exceed the maximum height of structures within the resource conservation (RC) zone. However, because this use is being allowed and permitted under the similar and compatible provisions, height standards for "pipeline, transmission lines, and control stations" are controlling, and the California Public Utilities Commission for this similar use allows for utility-related structures to exceed the maximum height allowed in the underlying zoning if the height is necessary to, as in this case, provide for full operation capabilities of the electrical conveyance of utility facilities and protect the public.

For more than a dozen years, Hinkley has been a virtual ghost town, a circumstance which came about as a consequence of the contamination of the local water supply that occurred during the 1950s and 1960s when Pacific Gas & Electric utilized chromium-6 as an anti-corrosive agent in the cooling towers for the pressurizing stations built along the route of its West Texas-to-San Francisco natural gas line. Water from those towers was disposed of in unlined trenches near Hinkley and chromium-6, a highly toxic substance, has leached down into the water table as a result. Substantial numbers of local residents, concerned with the presence of chromium-6 in the environment, sold or outright abandoned their property. Pacific Gas & Electric, which has paid large settlements related to the contamination of the property, for many years participated in efforts to redress the contamination as well as supply the community with bottled water trucked in from outside the area or outfitted homes in Hinkley with water filtration systems. Eventually, the company hit upon the strategy of simply purchasing the property of all of the remaining residents or businesses in the community and emptying the community of its residents so that the chromium-6 clean up effort, which could cost well in excess of $200 million, does not need to be completed.

In this way, the area is considered to be an ideal location for certain types of industrial or other uses, including solar energy production facilities.

quest. Thereafter he set about having the Republican-dominated Texas state legislature comply with his wishful agenda to redraw the Texas Congressional District Map in such a way that the current balance of 25 Republicans, 12 Democrats and one vacant seat might be shifted to 30 Republicans and 13 Democrats after the November 2026 election.

To Democrats, there was no doubt their rivals were simply loading the dice in an effort to give Republicans better odds at maintaining control over the House after the 2026 election cycle. If the Republicans could do that in Texas, Newsom figured, the Democrats could do it in California.

That might not be exactly accurate. Texas has no equivalent to Proposition 20, so the Republican legislature and the Republican governor have a free hand there to do as they want. Still, Governor Newsom appears convinced that with a strong campaign in favor of the initiative to approve the new map, which is to be bankrolled by a war chest consisting of money put up from the leftovers of Newsom's 2022 gubernatorial reelection campaign, the Service Employees International Union, Democrat businessman Andrew Hauptman and the Democratic House Majority Political Action Committee, California's voters can be convinced to support the reapportionment to prevent the president from having the legislative support he needs to accomplish his agenda.

Governor Newsom and his supporters, openly condemning Republicans for seeking to gerrymander electoral districts in favor of their party.

Today, Democrats in the Assembly and Legislature voted to pass a historic measure that empowers California voters to push back against Donald Trump's power grab in Texas.

The special election to be held on November 4, California Assembly Speaker Robert Rivas said on Thursday as the legislature moved to put the matter on the ballot, will give "California voters... the final decision to fight back against Trump's attacks on their state economy and democracy. I'm proud to stand with my Democratic colleagues today as we pass this historic measure." Democrats are merely standing up against the Republican oppressors, Rivas said, "with courage. President Trump wants us to be intimidated. His playbook is simple: bully, threaten, silence — then rig the rules to hang onto power. Well, we are here today because California will not be a bystander to that power grab. We are

"healing," swelling of the neck and a brain hemorrhage. Investigators and prosecutors eventually established that Jake and Vanessa were involved in the abuse of their infant daughter, and the criminal case against them dragged on for more than four years while each made accusations against each other and the marriage ended in di-acting — openly, lawfully with purpose and resolve, to defend our state and our democracy. Donald Trump does not believe in democracy. He is terrified of losing — and he will do whatever it takes to cling to power. If Trump can't win fairly, he'll try to make it impossible for Republicans to lose."

Governor Newsom said that what the Democrats are doing is "fighting fire with fire."

That clashed with what some of the state's Republicans had to say.

California Assembly Minority Leader James Gallagher said, "No public hearings. No transparency. Com-voice. Jake and Vanessa had another child, Jake Jr., who was born with fetal alcohol syndrome. Both Jake and Vanessa entered guilty pleas to willful cruelty against a child. Jake was sentenced to four years in prison, but the sentence was suspended in lieu of his completing 180 days in jail, during which he was granted a work release. Vanessa was given a 120-day sentence, which was also subject to work release.

The child was severely disabled after having had to undergo a tracheotomy, and is now blind, unable to walk or speak, with three to seven percent brain function. She is entirely dependent upon her aunt, her primary caregiver.

Based on what they were learning, investigators redoubled their scrutiny of the Haros, whose Cabazon home was subjected to a search pursuant to a search warrant, one which included the use of cadaver dogs. Jake's and Rebecca's cell phones were seized and they both willingly disclosed to investigators the devices' passwords.

Contrary to reports that Rebecca was not cooperating with the investigation, she was repeatedly subject to interrogations and what those knowledgeable about the investigation said were "coercive and sugges-

County Criminalizing Homelessness

Alex Beltran said, “I believe that we’re all one layoff or one large medical bill away from being unhoused in these times right now. We all see the rising cost of groceries, obviously housing. Everything is going up, wages are staying the same and it’s hard to keep up. We need real housing solutions. A majority of unhoused people are over 50 seniors that most likely live off Social Security and they can’t keep up. So they end up unhoused and are looking for help and looking for a solution. They’re not trying to break the law and end up incarcerated. We need to help our unhoused neighbors and help our community instead of punishing them just for being poor and not being able to keep up.”

Latoya Cipali said she was living on the streets at the age of 13. “If I would have been convicted as a criminal for being homeless during those times, I would have been robbed of my future, robbed of my opportunity to turn my circumstances around. I would have been in the hamster wheel cycle of homelessness, had I been convicted for being homeless. Although I was dealt a bitter hand at [that] my age, not being convicted of homelessness gave me the opportunity to better my situation and overcome it. It gave me the opportunity to have a chance in life. I thank God that not only did I overcome homelessness because everybody doesn’t have that luck, but I’ve also received and completed my college education, ran several businesses, including housing elderly that also were homeless, and I have been blessed to be able to feed our current homeless residents. So, criminalizing me for being homeless would not have been the answer for my future or our current homeless citizens’ future. I oppose agenda item 72 and pray that you would find it in your best interest in doing the same.”

William Cipali, who works as a social services counselor, recounted receiving phone calls from a high school faculty member concerned about the prospect of students being cited, fined and labeled as lawbreakers before they reach adulthood because their families have been reduced to living on the streets.

Living on the streets is bad enough Cipali observed, and county government wants to “throw the factor of criminalizing this too now as well. Are we going to give a record to this child who has nowhere to go, who’s caught, who’s reaching out to their counselor? They don’t have a place to stay. And now we’re going to criminalize that as well. Understand that I receive these phone calls on a daily basis. So, all we’re going to do is basically make it harder for them, for the door to shut for them to receive work, to receive jobs, just to be a normal, abiding citizen.”

Maribel Nunez expressed admiration for the county’s effort to address the homeless problem, but called upon the board of supervisors to “modify [the ordinance] ... in a way that is humane.”

Pastor Sharon Green told the board of supervisors, “Most people don’t choose to live in encampments. There are a number of circumstances that will lead someone to make that choice.” Green questioned whether the county government had the moral authority to throw people in jail for being homeless when it has been uncooperative in efforts to construct or otherwise establish homes and shelters for the dispossessed.

“This county has been an obstruction to the majority of those projects,” she said.

Marcos Orozco said, “I don’t see where criminalizing homelessness equals to solving the problem of homelessness. These people need help. I don’t understand why trying to make these homeless them criminals, by fining them, how that is going to solve the problem? I don’t get where that makes sense.”

Christina Trujillo, who said she was in a state of on-again, off-again homelessness, was opposed to item 72 “because I’m out there every day doing the same thing everybody else is: trying to survive, trying to get by, trying to get back on my feet. It’s hard when you put things like this in front of us because now there are we’re more barriers we got to go over. We were housed and we were kicked out again. We’re in a motel.”

The voucher she has will expire before September 1. “By the end of this month, we should know if we’re gonna get housed or if we’re gonna end up back in a tent. I just hope that you guys will understand that we are trying our best to get off the streets. We’re doing our best. We’re meeting you guys halfway. We’re not asking for a handout. We’re asking for a hand up to lift us, help us lift ourselves up. And if you guys can make meet us halfway like we’re meeting you guys halfway, that’ll be great. But item 72 is not going to make it easier for us.”

Mario Garcia, who does mutual aid work with the homeless, said “Homeless people are just people just like anyone else. They don’t deserve to be put in this cycle where they’re constantly being put into jail. They’re given vouchers at hotels that then kick them out. These are all very temporary band-aid solutions.”

He called on the board of supervisors to oppose item 72 “as it further criminalizes people that are just trying to survive on the streets and are in positions that are systemic and aren’t really individualized. No one wakes up in the morning and decides to be homeless. It’s through a series of events that gets them there. And I think further criminalizing these people wouldn’t really solve the issue, especially when we’re proposing this without any solutions that haven’t been built yet.”

Albert Gutierrez said the ordinance contradicted the board’s state objective of helping the homeless.

“I believe that we forgot about ethics,” he said. “People that have voted for people to be in office voted for people to be a part of the people, right? I believe that we forgot that our neighbors, whether we’re homeless or not, we’ve already experienced hardship.”

He said that county authorities were overestimating the number of people who were homeless because of drug use, and were using the erroneous assumption that drug use is the basis of the homelessness problem to justify throwing everyone without a roof over their heads in jail.

“Do you hear me? I’m talking not about mental issues, drug substance abuse, none of that. There’s a lot of other percentages, you know, of individuals that are willing to come out of where they’re at.”

Fatima Baeza said, “Earlier this year, I started meeting and getting to know some of our neighbors that are unhoused. Hearing about their experiences with the services they are referred to and seeing what they have to go through every day to stay alive is enough for anyone to know that simply criminalizing living outside solves nothing unless the solutions you’re satisfied with are to make this subgroup of people out of sight, out of mind. A greater effort needs to be put into staying in touch with unhoused people needing help.”

That the county offers certain programs to the homeless population does not absolve it of the need to be compassionate with those who destitute.

“When people live on the street, they don’t always have access to a phone that they can contact the services they are referred to with, whether it’s because of their phone getting stolen or not being able to pay a phone bill that month. While accountability is important on both ends of the continuum of care, on one of these ends, there are people struggling to survive, having to split the little money they can get from donations between necessities like food, tarps for heat protection and shelter, personal hygiene items. Making it unlawful for an individual to dwell in the only places they can be in is especially cruel when the alternative being offered are services that do not have a track record of getting the majority of them into permanent housing. Banning encampments won’t get rid of them. It will only lead people back to living on the streets.”

Lorraine Enriquez said, “I think that the

On 09/16/2025 at 01:00PM, Yuhua Chen as the duly appointed Trustee under and pursuant to Deed of Trust Recorded on 06/12/2024 as Instrument No. 2024-0135181 of official records in the Office of the Recorder of San Bernardino County, California, executed by: Phillip H. Lam, AKA Phillip Hon Lam, a married man as his joint property, as Trustor, WILL SELL AT PUBLIC AUCTION TO THE HIGHEST BIDDER FOR CASH (payable at time of sale in lawful money of the United States, by cash, a cashier’s check drawn by a state or national bank, a check drawn by a state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, savings association, or savings bank specified in section 5102 of the Financial Code and authorized to do business in this state). The property heretofore described is being sold “as is”. The street address and other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 521 Doral Street, Ontario, CA 91761.

Public Notices

The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein. Said sale will be made, but without covenant or warranty, expressed or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to pay the remaining principal sum of the note(s) secured by said Deed of Trust, with interest thereon, as provided in said note(s), advances, if any, under the terms of the Deed of Trust, estimated fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee and of the trusts created by said Deed of Trust, to-wit: $121,275.80 (Estimated). Accrued interest and additional advances, if any, will increase this figure prior to sale. The Beneficiary may elect to bid less than the full credit bid. The beneficiary under said Deed of Trust heretofore executed and delivered to the undersigned a written Declaration of Default and Demand for Sale, and a written Notice of Default and Election to Sell. The undersigned caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located and more than three months have elapsed since such recordation. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder’s office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. Cashier’s checks tendered at the Trustee’s Sale shall be made payable to Lender’s Foreclosure Services. If the Trustee is unable to convey title or the sale is set aside for any reason, the successful bidder shall have no other recourse against the Trustor, the Beneficiary, or the Trustee except for a full refund of monies paid to the Trustee at the sale. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (626) 579-5350 or visit www.lendersforeclosureservices.com, using the file number assigned to this case 25-03-1076. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. If you are the owner of a residential real property containing no more than four dwelling units, the sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed ONCE for 45 days pursuant to Section 2924f of the California Civil Code, if the trustee receives from you, at least five business days before the scheduled date of sale, by certified mail with the United States Postal Service or by another overnight mail courier service with tracking information that confirms the recipient’s signature and the date and time of receipt and delivery, a listing agreement with a California licensed real estate broker to be placed in a publicly available marketing platform for the sale of the property. If the trustee receives, at least five business days before the scheduled date of sale, from you, by certified mail with the United States Postal Service or by another overnight mail courier service with tracking information that confirms the recipient’s signature and the date and time of receipt and delivery, a copy of a purchase agreement for the sale of the property, the trustee shall postpone the scheduled date of sale to a date that is at least 45 days after the date on which the purchase agreement was received by the trustee. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an “eligible tenant buyer,” you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an “eligible bidder,” you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 626-579-5350 or visit this internet website www.lendersforeclosureservices.com using the file number assigned to this case 25-03-1076 to find the date on which the trustee’s sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee’s sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee’s sale. If you think you may qualify as an “eligible tenant buyer” or “eligible bidder,” you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. 8/18/25 Yu-Hua Chen, as Trustee c/o Lender’s Foreclosure Services 2158 Durfee Ave El Monte, CA 91733 (626)-579-5350
