Secret Board Positions, Undisclosed Contracts, and Campaign Cash Raise Questions About Ethics Violations. An FPPC complaint alleges systemic conflicts of interest involving the county's top education officials. San Bernardino County's highest-ranking education officials are facing serious allegations of ethics violations, undisclosed conflicts of interest, and potential criminal conduct in

Ted Alejandre
a complaint filed with California's Fair Political Practices Commission (FPPC) on September 3, 2025.

The complaint targets County Superintendent Ted Alejandre and Chief Business Officer Richard DeNava, alleging they maintained secret leadership positions at SchoolsFirst Federal Credit Union while simultaneously overseeing lucrative contracts with the same institution, creating what critics describe as a web of financial entanglements that violated multiple state laws.

At the center of the allegations is SchoolsFirst Federal Credit Union, which serves as the third-party administrator for San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools' (SBCSS) employee retirement plans, a contract worth tens of thousands of dollars annually that was never disclosed to the county board or public. While this contract generated substantial revenue for SchoolsFirst, both Alejandre and DeNava held undisclosed leadership positions within the credit union's governance structure, creating what the complaint describes as an "unprecedented dual audit conflict." Ted Alejandre, who earns over $300,000 annually as county superintendent, allegedly served in two key SchoolsFirst positions: 2022, member of SchoolsFirst's Supervisory See P 2

Redlands Ends Ties With Old Shelter Manager In Effort To Reestablish State Housing Division Connection

The City of Redlands this week made a significant stride in distancing itself from the embezzlement scandal that two years ago threatened to thoroughly disconcert if not outright destroy the model homeless assistance program it had managed to establish.

Redlands was among one of dozens of California cities that moved to take advantage of money being offered by the State of California through its Department of Housing and Community Development via the so-called Homekey Program, which was being pushed by Governor Gavin Newsom at around the time of the COVID-19 pandemic in 2020.

Using Homekey funds and matching city money, Redlands partnered with Step Up on Second, the Santa Monica-based nonprofit to take possession of the Good Nite Inn, located on Industrial Avenue, and convert its 98 hotel rooms into mini-living quarters, complete with kitchenettes and bathrooms to house and support, variously, individual homeless or homeless couples. Step Up on Second affiliated with a Los Angeles-based developer, Shangri-La Industries, to engage in those conversions. That project progressed well. In March 2023, the facility opened, becoming what was, in the most straightforward of terms, one of the best examples of how a state/local public agency/private industry solution to the See P 3

Failed Bid To Frame State Senator Subjecting Police Reporting Autonomy To Scrutiny

By Mark Gutglueck
The Sacramento Police Department's arrest of State Senator Sabrina Cervantes on suspicion of driving under the influence charges along with misrepresentations on affidavits and reports filed in conjunction with the case have brought under scrutiny the substantial license law enforcement officers are given in how they are to approach investigations and what they are allowed to put into and keep out of their reports. On May 19 at around 1 p.m., less than an hour before she was due to be on the floor of the upper house of the state legislature, Cervantes was driving in a state-owned black Toyota Camry sedan east on S Street in midtown Sacramento roughly seven blocks south of the Capitol building when a white Ford Explorer headed north on 14th Street that had been stopped at the stop sign there pulled into the intersection just before Cervantes entered it. Despite Cervantes' leftward move to avoid a collision as she drove with the right-of-way at about 35 miles per hour through the intersection, the SUV collided with the right side of Cervantes' sedan. Both drivers stopped and remained at the scene, Cervantes' car at the left side of S Street and the other driver near the northeast corner of the intersection. Cervantes and the other driver had what most sources agree was an approximately three-minute exchange during which they identified themselves and satisfied each other that neither party was seriously injured. Thereafter, Cervantes contacted her office. Both her chief of staff, Cesar Anda, and the fleet manager for the California Senate, Alex Cruz, responded See P 2

Federal Authorities Sue IEHP Over Medi-Cal Fund Diversions

The United States Attorney's Office has filed a complaint under the False Claims Act in a lawsuit against Inland Empire Health Plan (IEHP), a California local initiative health plan based in Rancho Cucamonga.

Inland Empire Health Plan is contracted with California's Department of Health Care Services (DHCS) to arrange for the provision of health care services to Riverside County and San Bernardino County residents under Medi-Cal, California's version of the federal Medicaid program.

Supervisors Showcase Growth And Innovation At State Of The County Event

More than 1,300 business, government and community leaders gathered at the 2025 State of the County Event on Wednesday to learn how San Bernardino County is building a stronger tomorrow through workforce development, technology and innovation, entertainment and tourism, mining and natural resources, and manufacturing industries.

This year, some of the county's student leaders assisted members of the board of supervisors in presenting information on the county's leading economic sectors and their top employers.

Kaine Koltoniuk from Hesperia's Sultana High School in the First Supervisorial District spoke about Castle Mountain Gold Mine and CalPortland Cement, as well as MP Materials in Mountain Pass, which is the most productive U.S. mine producing rare earth materials, accounting for more than 10 percent of the world supply. Recently, MP Materials announced a new public-private partnership with the U.S. Department of Defense to accelerate the development of a complete U.S. rare earth magnet supply chain.

Julius Freeman, a student leader from Etiwanda High School in the Second Supervisorial District highlighted another key business, KraftPal Technologies in Ontario. KraftPal is a market leader in sustainable corrugated cardboard pallet solutions with products that use 80 percent less material from trees and are 100 percent recyclable. Freeman also recognized Alger Precision Machining in Ontario and Sorenson Engineering in Yucaipa for their efforts to work with local vocational programs to source and develop talent.

Second District Supervisors Jesse Armendarez lauded the success of Crown Technical Systems in Fontana as a leader in power distribution and protection systems.

Aakriti Maske from Redlands High School in the Third Supervisorial District made a presentation with Third District Supervisor Dawn Rowe, who is also chairwoman of the board of supervisors and See P 3

Committee, and 2023: Chairman of the Supervisory Committee. The Supervisory Committee wields significant power within credit union governance, including hiring external auditors (Moss Adams LLP handled SchoolsFirst's 2023 audit), reviewing internal audit reports, overseeing risk management, and monitoring regulatory examinations.

Here's where the conflict becomes particularly troubling: As county superintendent, Alejandre also controls SBCSS's audit process, including selecting auditors and setting audit scope, powers that the county board does not share.

"This means Alejandre simultaneously controlled SBCSS's audits and SchoolsFirst's audits," the complaint states, "creating a dual audit conflict that allowed him to suppress or shape findings on both sides of the rela-to the scene. Cruz provided the other driver with the full range of registration and insurance information required under California law following a traffic collision. Cruz gave Cervantes another state-owned vehicle and Anda then drove her to the Kaiser Hospital in Sacramento.

The driver of the other vehicle remained at the scene of the accident, waiting for a tow truck, at which point Sacramento Police arrived. The driver was interviewed by Officer Dan Williams, who conducted an interview while the driver remained in her vehicle. During that brief contact, the driver was unable to produce for the officer either her driver's license or proof of insurance. That driver was cleared to leave after responding that she had tionship without oversight or public transparency."

Meanwhile, Alejandre's financial disclosure forms show he received thousands of dollars annually from SchoolsFirst, including $6,746 plus $3,479 in 2021 alone, and $7,795 plus $6,567 plus $1,604 plus $693 in 2023.

Richard DeNava's alleged violations span an even longer period. The complaint alleges he held various SchoolsFirst positions since 2014:2014-2020: Advisory Council, Finance Committee, and Associate Director roles, 2021-2024: Full Board of Directors member with fiduciary duties to act in SchoolsFirst's best interests, and 2019: Vice President of the California Association of School Business Officials (CASBO).

Despite these significant positions, DeNava's required financial disclosure forms (Form 700s) from 2018-2024, all declare "None" for outside positions and economic interests, a pattern the complaint describes as systematic not had anything alcoholic to drink.

A short time later, Williams and another officer, Bailey Tye Foster, arrived at the Kaiser Hospital, where they found Senator Cervantes in the emergency room waiting area.

As a consequence of their interaction with her, they concluded Cervantes was possibly intoxicated and Williams requested that she undergo a "horizontal gaze" field sobriety test. She declined, offering instead to submit to an on-the-spot drawing of a blood sample, given that they were at a hospital. In doing so, Cervantes insisted upon making a phone call to the State Senate's legal counsel to confirm her belief that it would be best for her and all concerned to rely upon the more accurate and objective blood analysis than the subjective and less-accurate evaluation of her eye response to a moving object. Williams resolved to go for-

sample from Cervantes based upon a warrant, despite his observation that he could not detect an odor of alcohol on her breath and that Cervantes was willing to provide, voluntarily, a blood sample.

Williams and Foster conveyed their intentions to police headquarters, whereupon Officer Kevin Lucas authored an affidavit to obtain a search warrant. Somewhat ironically, the department's insistence on going the route of obtaining a warrant for the blood draw delayed until 6:10 p.m. the taking of the blood sample which could have been drawn several hours earlier if the police had acceded to Cervantes' suggestion that she voluntarily provide the blood sample to be drawn by the hospital's medical professionals.

concealment. The complaint alleges violations of several California statutes designed to prevent exactly this type of conduct, such as the Political Reform Act Violations. California's Political Reform Act (Government Code §§ 81000 et seq.) requires public officials to disclose financial interests that could create conflicts. The law mandates Form 700 filings that provide public transparency about officials' economic relationships. Both officials allegedly failed to disclose their SchoolsFirst governance roles on these required forms, violations that can result in fines up to $5,000 per violation plus three times the amount of any unlawful benefit received.

Conflict of Interest Laws are mentioned as well. Government Code §§ 87100-87103 prohibit public officials from participating in governmental decisions that could financially benefit their outside economic interests. The statute requires officials to recuse themselves from such decisions or face potential felony charges. The complaint alleges both officials violated these provisions by participating in decisions affecting SchoolsFirst while holding undisclosed positions with the credit union.

Perhaps most seriously, the complaint alleges violations of Government Code § 1090, which makes it a felony for public officials to have a financial interest in contracts they influence in their official capacity. Section 1090 violations can result in,

Felony charges punishable by up to three years in prison, forfeiture of office, permanent disqualification from holding public office, contract voidance, and civil penalties.

The financial entanglements allegedly extend beyond the hidden governance roles such as campaign contributions. SchoolsFirst's political action committee contributed at least $6,000 to Alejandre's campaign, money that was processed by DeNava in his role as campaign treasurer, even while DeNava served on Virtually immediately, even as the final touches were being put on the citation report that was forwarded to the Sacramento County District Attorney's Office for prosecution, the Sacramento Police Department put out a statement that Cervantes had been cited under a California statute that prohibits driving under the influence of "any drug," including prescription or over-the-counter medications that might impair a driver's ability to operate a motor vehicle.

"Senator Cervantes was cited for suspicion of driving a motor vehicle under the influence of a central nervous system depressant," the department promulgated, emphasizing that at the hos-

The complaint details a pattern of gifts from SchoolsFirst to SBCSS programs: Teacher of the Year awards ($250 checks to winners), backpack donations to schools, Various other gifts and sponsorships. These gifts allegedly don't appear on required disclosure forms, raising questions about additional unreported benefits.

Beyond individual ethics violations, the complaint highlights a broader transparency failure. The SchoolsFirst contract appears nowhere in SBCSS's adopted budgets for 2024-25 or 2025-26, nor in county board agendas, despite district policies requiring board approval for contracts exceeding $25,000. "There does not appear to have been a bidding or request for proposal "RFP process," the complaint notes, "and the decision to contract with SchoolsFirst was done by Alejandre and DeNava" without public oversight.

response is totally different – um, so I thought maybe she was just like shaken up."

At some point, which is not clear from the publicly available documentation, the results from the blood analysis showing that there was neither alcohol nor other intoxicants in Cervantes' system became available. Nevertheless, either before the results of the test were available or afterward, officers with the Sacramento Police Department opted to double down on the citation issued to the state senator. A filing was made to the California Department of Motor Vehicles to inform it of Cervantes' citation, which would potentially, pursuant to a finding that the citation was based upon valid criteria and proof, lead to the suspension of her driver license. Storm Warnings and "Scorned" Warnings

By Phill Courtney

Last July's deadly floods in Texas reminded us once again of how often we keep repeatedly ignoring one of the lessons that the sinking of the British ocean liner Titanic should have taught us but didn't: that while we should make our plans carefully and hope for the best, we should still always plan for the worst.

Famously, or rather infamously, as is now well known, the liner did not come equipped with enough lifeboats for everyone on board that cold April night in 1912 and consequently over 1,500 souls went to a watery death because the company thought that those lifeboats would "clutter" the deck, while also thinking it was basically unthinkable that the ship was sinkable.

As has so often happened throughout history, they did not plan for the worst, but the worst also happened partly because they were not required to do so by government regulations; a "perfect storm" so to speak, resulting in tragedy. And now such seems to be the case with the floods in Texas.

Although the areas inundated by the Guadalupe River were prone to floods in the past—floods which had resulted in by no means insignificant amounts of deaths, while this time government regulations had been in place "red flagging" those areas—the regulations had been compromised and weakened by various "deals" cut between landowners and government officials.

The most high-profile and heartbreaking incident during the July 4th flooding was the literal wiping out of Camp Mystic, a girls' Christian summer camp on the banks of the Guadalupe, owned and operated by Dick Eastland since 1974. Although, to his credit, Eastland had proposed and had finally seen put in place an automatic flood alert system after a flood in 1987, complacency had gradually increased since then and when the company that had installed the system went out of business in 1997, the river authority had decommissioned the system in 1999, citing unreliability and the possibility of false alarms.

Also adding to this "perfect storm," was the lack of other flood warning alerts by phone and sirens. Besides the fact that the Mystic camp girls were not allowed to have cell phones (so, even if there had been phone alerts, they wouldn't have heard them), county residents had balked at the possibility of some raucous horns going off accidentally, while also rejecting the costs involved—all reminiscent for me of those public service TV announcements in the '60 and '70, urging the use of seatbelts that included interviews with women who said they didn't like them because they "wrinkled" their skirts.

Also contributing to the chaos were the conflicting and sometimes muddled responses by several government organizations, including the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), which, like many other U.S. departments, has been impacted by funding cuts from the Trump administration. Headed now by former South Dakota governor (and South Dakota Snow Queen pageant winner), Kristi Noem, whose immaculate make-up and the various "theme" outfits she sports are always in place, attempts to ferret out the facts by organizations like CNN only resulted in a series of frustrating "she said—they said" backs-and-forths at press conference and in official statements.

to take a chemical test to determine her blood alcohol level. Such a refusal as alleged would constitute a violation of California Vehicle Code Section 23612.

Beset with the allegations against her being processed through two forums, one judicial and one administrative, Cervantes retained legal counsel to represent her and make a presentation of not only countervailing information but the known exculpatory evidence which the police department was withholding from the prosecutorial and administrative record.

That there was some problem with the case against Cervantes was perhaps first given indication when news organizations both with and without citation of the California Public Records Act sought from the police department evidence, including video footage and test results, that would establish the senator was in fact driving under the influence during the May 19 incident. Uniformly, both with media outlets that were on poor terms with the police department and ones with a far better relationship, including ones which had unquestioningly published the initial reports of Cervantes' arrest, the police department refused to disgorge anything, claiming that doing so would, variofficials allegedly maintained hidden financial relationships with a vendor while making decisions that could benefit that vendor, all while the public and their elected board remained unaware of these conflicts.

The FPPC now faces the task of investigating these allegations, which could result in: administrative penalties and fines, referral for criminal prosecution at both state and federal levels, requirement for officials ously, compromise an ongoing investigation or the prosecution. This presaged a shift in public perception, as it raised questions about why the department had issued the citation if it was yet involved in investigating the circumstances relating to the crime.

Upon receiving the results of the toxicology analysis of the blood drawn from Senator Cervantes that showed there were no drugs or alcohol in her system, the Sacramento County District Attorney's office declined to file any criminal charges against her. In the same timeframe, Cervantes' legal team was able to obtain footage from officers Williams' and Foster's bodyworn cameras in which the audio demonstrated that Cervantes had twice consented to having her blood drawn, directly contradicting Williams' sworn statement in the affidavit in support of the request for the issuance of the warrant to draw her blood to determine if she had been driving under the influence. That footage along with the results of the blood analysis was provided to the Department of Motor Vehicles, which then concluded the police department's effort to cancel her driver's license in her favor.

Ultimately, Cervantes and her attorney, James Quadra, resolved to file a claim for damages against the Sacramento Police Department for having defamed her with the false allegations of driving under the influence of drugs, thereby damaging her reputation. Under California to recuse themselves from related decisions, contract modifications or cancellations, and broader reforms to prevent future conflicts.

Federal Interest: Given the serious federal criminal exposure, this case could attract attention from the FBI's Public Corruption Unit and the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Central District of California. Federal prosecutors have successfully pursued similar cases involv-law, Cervantes will have six months to file a lawsuit against the City of Sacramento, its police department and the responsible parties once the city rejects the claim or two years from the date of the driving under the influence citation to file suit if the city does not respond to the claim.

This week, Quadra and Cervantes followed up with the release of a 14 minute and 53 second video which combines multiple video camera passages, including footage from a security camera for a business located at the southwest corner of S and 14th streets in Sacramento which captured the moving images of the May 19 vehicular accident, as well as video footage from officers Williams' and Foster's bodyworn cameras in their interaction with Cervantes that afternoon. The security video obtained from the business located at the corner of S Street and 14th Street clearly shows that it was the driver of the car that T-boned Cervantes in the intersection who was at fault in the mishap, and that Cervantes was moving through the intersection with the right-of-way at a safe speed and had, in fact, moved into the oncoming westbound lane in an effort to avoid the collision. The videos from the officers' bodyworn cameras taken at the hospital show Cervantes was not walking with an unsteady gait. The audio passages from those videos unequivocally demonstrate that Cervantes was not slurring her speech while conversing with the offi-ing educational officials who concealed conflicts of interest while steering contracts to favored vendors. For Alejandro and DeNava, the stakes are enormous. Beyond potential state criminal liability, federal charges could result in decades in prison, substantial financial penalties, and permanent federal consequences that would affect everything from future employment to federal benefits.

cers and that she had not once but twice consented to having her blood drawn.

The passages on the video, taken together with the recitation of facts in Cervantes' claim lay out the case that the Sacramento Police Department, or a subset of it, not only made a series of provably false accusations against her in seeking to obtain the warrant to draw her blood but did so in bad faith, knowing the accusations to be untrue. Moreover, according to the claim and the documents filed in support of it, the officers involved violated multiple laws in pursuing the case against Cervantes, repeatedly engaging in perjury along the way.

At the heart of the matter is the reality that police officers have tremendous license in how they are to approach investigations and what they are allowed to put into and keep out of their reports. That discretion represents a tremendous degree of power, or potential power. Society in general and the California legislature has vested that authority in law enforcement personnel because of the belief that if used judiciously and wisely, in the hands of a competent and honest officer of the law, that discretion can be of benefit, perhaps monumental benefit, to the community or society as a whole. In pursuing the claim he has made on behalf of Cervantes, Quadra is intent on establishing that such discretion can prove devastatingly destructive to the victims of the incompetent or corrupt wielding of that

This alleged case reflects broader concerns about transparency and accountability in California's complex educational governance structure, where county offices of education wield significant authority over public funds while often operating with less public scrutiny than local school districts.

As the FPPC investigation proceeds, the San Bernardino County education community will power.

While Senator Cervantes, it now appears, will likely emerge from the circumstance growing out of the events of May 19 intact and with her reputation eventually restored, it is far less likely that an average citizen, who does not have the status of being an elected official or the advantage of having a powerful lawyer to stand up for him or her, would be able to come through an incident unscathed when law enforcement officers deliberately conspire to manufacture inculpatory evidence that doesn't actually exist against him or her while hiding exculpatory evidence. For that reason, there are elements of the California populace who believe that the officers who appeared to have abused the discretion entrusted to them in their dealing with Senator Cervantes should not remain at liberty to exercise that discretion in the future.

In his complaint filed on behalf of Cervantes, Quadra names as principals Officers Williams and Foster, who encountered, confronted and questioned Senator Cervantes on May 19 and carried out an investigation into the accident that day and thereafter; Officer Lucas, who authored the affidavit to obtain the warrant to force Cervantes to submit to providing a blood sample; and Sergeant Kristen Beal, who oversaw Williams, Foster and Lucas in their handling of the Cervantes case.

According to Quadra, Cervantes was the victim of a "false arrest."

In the narrative of the events of May 19 contained in the complaint, Officer Williams arrived knowing that the accident involved Senator Cervantes, and was apparently gunning to use it as a means of harming the Senator and her reputation. Williams discovered early that Cervantes was not at fault in the accident, according to Quadra, in that an examination of the "vehicles show[ed] that the other driver had t-boned Senator Cervantes' vehicle after entering an intersection where the driver had a stop sign and Senator Cervantes had the right of way." Nevertheless, according to Quadra, Officer Williams treated the other driver with kid gloves, treating her as if she was not the party at fault. "He did not ask her to exit the vehicle to check her gait/balance and did not get close enough to detect if there was alcohol on her breath," Quadra's narrative states. "He did not ask to speak to her privately. He did not question her obviously false story about entering the intersection lawfully. He did not immediately cite her for failing to produce a driver's license in violation of California Vehicle Code Section 12951. He did not ask her to submit to any sobriety tests, and asked minimal questions in a leading way designed to help her (e.g., 'No alcohol today, right?')."

In contrast, according to Quadra, Williams was angling from the outset to implicate her in driving under the influence.

Williams, according to Quadra assumed the 11-bath 11,000-square-foot mansion at 9301 Cherokee Lane in Beverly Hills valued at $13.4 million; make over half of a million dollars in $48,000-per-month lease payments on another Beverly Hills property for over a year; lay out $54,400 in company funds on 20 VIP passes to the Coachella Valley Music and Arts Festival; another $43,475 for private jet travel; purchase his then-girlfriend, Madeline Witt, a $111,000 Birkin bag; spend another $16,839 for a Hermes Orange Togo Birkin; buy a $35,000 Audemars Piaget diamond watch; and acquire a $127,073 53-carat weight diamond necklace. Simultaneously, Holmes was leasing, using Shangri-La funds, a 2021 Bentley Bentayaga and a Ferrari Portofino.

The fallout from Holmes’ action dealt a near-

For instance, it was reported by CNN that Noem had to personally sign off on any expenditures above $100,000 which hamstrung efforts to proactively preposition Urban Search and Rescue crews who lacked a green light from Noem which did eventually come, but only three days later. Many news agencies also reported that emergency calls to FEMA went unanswered after Noem had allowed the contracts at four call centers to lapse, while other glaring oversight mistakes abounded.

After some of the dust had settled (or the flood waters had receded), Noem, cribbing a page from the Donald Trump playbook, dismissed all these charges as, of fatal blow to the concept of altruistic assistance to the homeless in the cities of San Bernardino, Redlands, Thousand Oaks, King, Salinas and elsewhere. The State of California sued city of Redlands, the County of San Bernardino, the City of King, the City of Thousand Oaks, the City of Salinas and Step Up on Second, together with PMF CA Real Estate Investment Trust, Qualifax, BMO Harris Bank, California TD Specialists, PPRF Real Estate Investment Trust, Lone Oak Fund, Arixia Institutional Lending Partners, LLC; Fairview Loan 123 LLC; 310 Real Estate Investment Trust, Medalist Partners Asset-Based Private Credit Fund III Commercial Real Estate LLC., Medalist Partners Asset-Based Real Estate Investment Trust III and Pacific Western Bank, the Tullius Law Group, the Law Firm of Foley & Lardner, the Fidelity National Title Corporation and Chicago Title Company, alleging they “breached their obligations” under terms of their agreements with the state.

According to the lawsuit, Shangri-La received more than $114 million in course, “fake news,” and “absolutely trash,” and, as so many others have on the “Trump team,” suffered no repercussions, nor calls from her boss to resign or, if not, face a firing. Once again, incompetence carried the day.

Meanwhile, Texas governor, Greg Abbott, when asked who was to blame, immediately bristled and fired back that it was not appropriate to fix blame, but rather to look forward like a football team after a stinging defeat and face the next game with confidence. In other words, like he does after the latest one of the many mass shootings in Texas, now was not the time for pointing fingers. Fixing blame is for losers. Let’s just offer those thoughts and prayers.

Now, before we leave the Texas floods and look forward at yet more Homekey funds from the state to convert motels or other buildings into permanent supportive housing in San Bernardino, Redlands, Thousand Oaks, King and Salinas, while Shangri-La thereupon granted and recorded deeds of trust to secure loans from the host of lenders without first obtaining the state’s written authorization, as required under the Homekey agreements.

The state also alleges in its lawsuit that for each of its Homekey-funded projects, Shangri-La used the address of each motel to create undercapitalized limited partnerships to perpetrate the fraud, subjecting all of the properties, some fully converted and others only partially converted, to possible foreclosure.

Only the Redlands project and the San Bernardino project, which involved the conversion of the All Star Lodge in San Bernardino into 76 units similar to those in Redlands available for the chronically homeless opened in March 2023, met the goal of transforming previously existing hotels or motels into residences for the homeless.

disasters to diagnose here and the lessons lost, we can’t do that without mentioning the tragic fate of the Mystic camp director and owner, Dick Eastland because he too, like the captain of the Titanic went “down with his ship,” after ignoring reality and the warnings he did receive that night until it was far too late, while always knowing the risks involved in the location of his camp.

So, while he did make that earlier effort to have alarms in place, later, it seems, knowing full well that Camp Mystic and its surroundings had been placed in a designated hazard zone by a flood insurance rate map, had, despite that, sought out and received permission from authorities to wave those restrictions and continued to operate until that rainy night of July 4th when it all ended in tragedy. So, it seems in San Bernardino County, Redlands, Thousand Oaks, King and Salinas failed to ensure that Shangri-La lived up to its performance requirements in its contract with them, according to the State of California.

It took tremendous effort, some skillful lawyering and intensified lobbying on the part of the City of Redlands to convince state officials that Redlands officials had not been the perpetrators of any fraud and that they were in fact victims whose admirable intentions and commitment had been egregiously betrayed and violated.

For months, Redlands officials sought to work with officials from Shangri-La Industries, who made a convincing case that they were, after all, Holmes’ victims, to see if the money Holmes had diverted could be recovered and the city’s financial obligations with regard to the financing of the conversion of the hotel satisfied. By Spring 2024, it was acknowledge that Shangri-La’s internal tracking and accounting mechanisms left much to be desired, based on the

this particular “blame game,” the fingers point in many directions.

Moving from water to fire, let’s now take a look at the many fire disasters that have hit the United States in recent years—particularly those in my home state of California. First, I should say, though, that there’s been a tendency to see these high-profile holocausts as somehow being unprecedented. They’re not.

Although when we think about some historically memorable fires, we tend to think of those in terms of urban fires, such as the loss of most of San Francisco in 1906 after the famous earthquake, and, of course, Chicago in 1871, far worst in terms of human deaths are wildfires, which have taken a far higher toll.

On the same night as the Chicago fire in Octtober of 1871, forest fires further north named after the most populous town there, Peshtigo, Wisconsin, devastated the region. Although the fires killed some 1,500 to 2,500 people, or five times the fatalities in Chicago, history has largely forgotten those deaths in favor of Chicago. History has also forgotten the lessons which should have been learned there: that placing human settlements inside of forests is a deadly combination.

Adding to that dynamic were the almost entirely unaltered practices of the industrial timber industry in the following years, with increased levels of logging, which, combined with drought and high winds, resulted in more wildfires and more deaths during predictable and recurring intervals.

Sadly, such is the case

way Holmes suckered its corporate officials, and that Redlands’ recovery of the money Holmes had taken would be too long in coming, if ever it was to come, as the company had filed for federal bankruptcy protection. In April 2024, the City of Redlands ended its relationship with Shangri-La Industries.

Similarly, Redlands had placed a considerable amount of faith in the Santa Monica-based homeless services nonprofit Step Up. Redlands officials had brought Step Up in to manage the homeless services facility after it had been converted from a hotel. That facility put homeless individuals and couples into minimalized living quarters. Step Up was affiliated with Shangri-La in a number of homeless residency projects, and was satisfactorily managing the Redlands facility. Nevertheless, its relationship with Shangri-La was a complicating factor, as both were entangled in the lawsuits brought by the State of California..

In May, the City of Redlands gave Step Up, which was in the process of discontinuing its homeless facility management operations, a 30-day notice of its intention to end its property management services arrangement with the company. Consequently, Step Up’s last day in the role of the property manager at the converted Good Nite Inn was June 30. The city had a temporary property manager fulfill that role over the last two-and-a-half months. This week, on Tuesday September 16, the Redlands City Council, after considering options charted by Redlands Homeless Solutions Coordinator David Rabindranath, opted to contract with Many Missions, a Thousand Oaks-based nonprofit to take on property management responsibility at the Redlands municipal homeless residence operation.

Earlier this week, the Redlands City Council authorized entering into a one-year, $300,000 agreement with Many Mansions to oversee day-to-day operations, including assuming property management duties, at the former Good Nite Inn at 1675 Industrial Park Avenue.

today, with those in California, of course, dominating the news, the most memorable of which recently were the massive urban fires of January 2025, which devastated among others, the communities of Pacific Palisades and Altadena, with some 19,000 structures burned to the ground, touching off another round of “how could this have happened?” and “what do we do in the future” discussions involving such topics as water storage; lack of escape routes; and out-of-touch politicians.

Almost lost in the shuffle, or the smoke (again), was the obvious fact that California governments continue to allow homes to be built in what’s been called the wildlands/urban interface, when houses are built on both picturesque hillsides and amid dense, worst about Cervantes, and shortly after locating her at the hospital “asked Senator Cervantes, ‘Had you been drinking?’” Senator Cervantes responded that she had not. Senator Cervantes also responded to questions about her injuries. During the interview by Officer Williams, Senator Cervantes remained standing despite being in pain from the accident. Officer Williams admitted that Senator Cervantes was not at fault for the accident but nevertheless requested that she submit to a subjective sobriety test. Rather than accept Senator Cervantes’ offer of having the hospital provide test results to the police officers, Officer Williams responded that they could not accept the hospital’s test result because they are protected by Senator Cervantes’ privacy rights. Obviously, Senator Cervantes was able to consent to disclosure of drug and alcohol tests (which the hospital performed, and which were negative), but Officer Williams and Officer Foster wanted to perform their less accurate and subjective test instead of accepting the chemical tests performed by the hospital.”

Sacramento Police Department Rushed To Have State Senator Prosecuted Before Verifying The Evidence It Had Indicated Guilt from front page

Despite encountering evidence and other indicators that Cervantes was sober, Quadra said, Williams insisted upon pressing forth with his erroneous theory that Cervantes was intoxicated.

“Officer Williams’ initial interview of Senator Cervantes lasted approximately 10 minutes,” according to Quadra. “She did not slur her words, walk with an unsteady gait, smell of alcohol, or have any indicators of being under the influence. She was suffering from a spine injury, which resulted in moving with care, but she did not sway, stumble, weave back and forth as she walked down a long hallway from the emergency room waiting area to be interviewed, or give any other indicator of being under the influence.”

Similarly, according to Quadra, Officer Foster mischaracterized Cervantes condition and “falsely stated that Senator Cervantes was slurring her words.”

Both Williams and Foster utilized the description Cervantes gave to them about her car ending up on the north side of S Street facing oncoming traffic after the accident to suggest she was inebriated, Quadra noted. In actuality, according to Quadra, when Cervantes departed to the hospital with her chief of staff, Cesar Anda, the car was where she had described it as being. It was only after she was en route to the hospital and when the Sacramento police had arrived that the car was towed the slight distance westward and then next to the curb on 14th Street, completely unbeknownst to Cervantes. Williams and Foster knew this to be the case and disingenuously and corruptly exploited this discrepancy to insinuate that she was intoxicated, according to Quadra.

While he was yet at the hospital, according to Quadra, in a phone conversation to a sergeant with the department, Foster “made additional false statements, including stating that Senator Cervantes’ ‘story’ did not ‘add up,’ because of where the state vehicle was found parked after the accident, even though Officer Foster had been present when Senator Cervantes’ chief of staff explained that the state car was parked on S Street when he arrived on the scene, and even though neither Officer Foster nor Officer Williams ever asked anyone if the vehicle had been moved after Senator Cervantes left for the hospital.”

In addition, according to Quadra, Foster conspired to implicate Cervantes by manipulating evidence, but doing so in a way that could not be documented.

“Officer Foster appeared to turn off his body camera, resulting in a gap in bodycam footage of approximately five minutes,” according to Quadra. “Turning off his body camera was a violation of Sacramento Police Department’s General Order 525.07, which states in part, ‘Once their BWC [body-worn camera] is activated, employees shall not deactivate their BWCs until the investigative or enforcement activity has concluded.’”

The falsification of evidence against Cervantes by the Sacramento Police Department, according to Quadra, was compartmentalized among several of its members.

“The affidavit in support of the warrant was signed under oath by Police Officer Kevin Lucas, and falsely claimed there was probable cause for a blood draw warrant because of supposed ‘slurred speech,’ ‘slow speech,’ and ‘unsteady feet,’” Quadra noted. The lawyer stated that Lucas claimed “when Senator Cervantes walked from the waiting room to a private room to be interviewed by the police officers, that she had an ‘unsteady gait’ and ‘appeared to be drowsy while speaking to Sacramento Police officers.’ Outrageously, the warrant affidavit referenced Senator Cervantes’ declining to undergo a subjective sobriety test by the officers as part of the reason for the alleged ‘probable cause,’ even though Officer Williams repeatedly admitted to Senator Cervantes that it was her absolute right to refuse the test, and that it was purely voluntary. The warrant affidavit also falsely stated that Senator Cervantes had refused to submit to a blood test. Based on the false information in the warrant affidavit submitted to the Sacramento Superior Court under penalty of perjury, the court issued the warrant.”

A succession of perjuries were perpetrated in the effort to frame Cervantes, Quadra maintained.

“At some point after Senator Cervantes’ blood was drawn, Officer Williams completed a false statement under penalty of perjury, which the Sacramento Police Department transmitted to the Department of Motor Vehicles. The statement falsely asserted that Senator Cervantes had refused to complete a chemical test after her arrest in violation of California Vehicle Code Section 23612, and that Senator Cervantes had refused to state what time she stopped driving. Because of this false report, Senator Cervantes’ driver’s license would have been suspended or revoked. Senator Cervantes was forced to retain counsel to demonstrate to the Department of Motor Vehicles [DMV] that Officer Williams’ sworn statement to DMV that Senator Cervantes committed a ‘violation’ through a ‘chemical test refusal’ was false. The DMV’s hearing officer reviewed the evidence provided by Senator Cervantes’ counsel, including irrefutable body cam footage showing that Senator Cervantes did not violate any law, and set aside the order that would have suspended her driver’s license.”

centive programs and (2) an extra-contractual retroactive rate increase. Through these schemes, IEHP misspent Medi-Cal Expansion funding for impermissible purposes, including spending on administrative expenses, Quadra continued, “Sacramento police violated Senator Cervantes’ rights under the Fourth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and Article I, Section 13 of the California Constitution unreasonable searches and seizures by detaining and arresting Senator Cervantes without probable cause and by conducting a blood test by obtaining a warrant without probable cause. Sacramento Police violated Penal Code §236 by detaining Senator Cervantes without reasonable suspicion or probable cause. Sacramento Police violated Penal Code §836 by arresting Senator Cervantes without probable cause. Sacramento Police violated Penal Code §1525 by obtaining a warrant and conducting a blood test of Senator Cervantes without probable cause. Sacramento Police violated Penal Code Penal Code §118.1 by intentionally and knowingly including false information in the police report relating to Senator Cervantes’ false arrest. Sacramento police violated Penal Code §118 by knowingly submitting false statements under oath to the Sacramento Superior Court and the California Department of Motor Vehicles.”

According to Quadra, officers with the Sacra-spected as they navigate this devastating loss. Our thoughts remain with the family and all those affected.”

The deluge proved unrelenting and the storm intensified over the San Bernardino Mountains and on their southern slope, creating the potential for mud and debris flows. On Highway 38, at least seven vehicles in the environs of Jenks Lake were left immobile other patient populations, and simply giving away federal funding in exchange for no value in return.

The complaint further alleges that IEHP was motivated by a desire to conserve its other funding, thus enriching itself.

The complaint alleges that, to make the spending appear legitimate, mento Police Department violated the Bane Act which prohibits an individual from “interfering” or “attempting to interfere by threat, intimidation, or coercion,” with the exercise or enjoyment of a constitutional or other right under California or federal law.” Quadra maintains this was done when Williams, Foster and Lucas, under the supervision of Beal, knowingly submitting false statements under oath in violation of Penal Code §118 to the Sacramento Superior Court to obtain a warrant without probable cause. In addition, Sacramento police officers violated the Bane Act, according to Quadra, when they knowingly submitting false statements under oath to the California Department of Vehicles (DMV) inaccurately claiming that Senator Cervantes had violated California Vehicle Code Section 23612.

According to Quadra, the involved officers and the City of Sacramento is open for Cervantes’ claim for false imprisonment in that the Sacramento police officers who were involved in her citation “lacked reasonable suspicion to detain or probable cause to arrest Senator Cervantes.” He cited Williams’ state-

The San Bernardino County Sheriff’s Department on Friday issued an evacuation warning for the communities of Forest Falls, Angelus Oaks, Seven Oaks and the Oak Glen area both north and south from Pendleton Road east to Glen Road.

Inland Empire Health Plan deceived the state by making false statements—which it knew would be relayed to the federal government—about the nature, timing, and purpose of its payments to providers. For example, IEHP internally admitted it was giving providers “free money” but asserted to DHCS that

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held October 14, 2025 at 9:00 a.m. in Department F-1 at San Bernardino County Superior Court Fontana District 17780 Arrow Boulevard Fontana, CA 92335

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under Section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Public Notices

Published in the San Bernardino County Sentinel on July 25 and August 1, 8 & 15, 2025. Corrected on September 12, 19, 26 and October 3, 2025.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF: LAVERNE MAE RUDOLF CASE NO. P R O V A 2 5 0 0 4 7 6 To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both of LAVERNE MAE RUDOLF:

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by KENNETH E. RUDOLF in the Superior Court of California, County of SAN BERNARDINO.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that KENNETH E. RUDOLF be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests that the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held in Dept. F-1 at 9:00 a.m. on November 20, 2025

San Bernardino County Superior Court Fontana District Department F1 – Fontana 17780 Arrow Boulevard Fontana, CA 92335 IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under Section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk. Attorney for Petitioner Kenneth Rudolf: Jeff W. hospital.

Quadra pointed out that the other driver had likewise remained in her vehicle while on the phone after the accident. He stated that Cervantes had donned the sunglasses and hat while in the hospital waiting room to “protect her privacy.”

Quadra hinted at a conspiracy within the department to hide even more damning evidence. When requests were made for Sergeant Beal’s body camera footage relating to the Cervantes matter, the department stonewalled and produced nothing, he stated.

In the claim, Quadra advanced theories as to why the Sacramento Police Department was hostile to Cervantes. “Claimant alleges that her false detention and arrest were motivated in retaliation of her political views... [and] were motivated in part by animus due to her ethnic background and sexual orientation.” The claim covers that before being elected to the California Senate, Cervantes “was the first openly LGBTQ+ [lesbian, gay, bisexual, transsexual, queer] Latina to represent her district” and that she “introduced State Bill 274 to curb potential abuses associated with use of automated license plate reader (ALPR) systems. but also picturesque (and deadly) brush and trees because of its status as “prime real estate,” where deals are cut to allow it despite all the cautions.

Perhaps one of the most egregious examples of this practice was the virtual obliteration of the ironically named Paradise, which was located amid the dense forests of the Sierra foothills in Northern California. When a fire broke out in November of 2018 (ignited by above ground Pacific Gas and Electric power lines—more on that shortly) it quickly swept into the town of almost 2,000, many of whom were unable to escape down the inadequate single-lane roads, resulting in 85 incinerated corpses, some found still sitting in their cars.

After the smoke cleared, the politicians swooped in to offer up their dubious “insights” into wildfires, including President Trump who cluelessly suggested that the problem was simply the lack of “raking” the forests like Finland does, despite people in Finland having no idea what he was talking about.

Other conservative commentators blasted the “woke” influence of “radical environmentalists” who were obviously behind all this because they’ve opposed controlled burns, and while the truth of the matter is that burning is a solution when part of natural cycles (like lightning strikes) through centuries of growth (and by some Native American tribes), and some trees even need fire to germinate their seeds, it’s long been suppressed by U.S. government fire policies, but now recognized as a mistake.

But again, largely buried beneath the debates, is this often unremarked upon question: should towns be built inside of forests to begin with? One exception amid that silence came in a report by the Sacramento Bee published shortly after the Paradise inferno, which quoted a former Sacramento Metropolitan Fire Chief who made this comment: “There’s just some places a subdivision shouldn’t be built.” To which I’ll add: “There’s just some places where towns shouldn’t be built.”

I received much the same response when I wrote an extended blog piece about wildfires in 2019 titled “Burning Issues,” and submitted it for perusal by the then fire chief in Redlands, who basically approved of my piece and echoed his colleague in Sacramento.

However, money often speaks more loudly than reason, so government planners and lawmakers continue to give in in the face of the public’s demand to live in beautiful forests and the profits to be made when they do, while, once again, the lessons have gone unlearned as people rebuild Paradise while yet other towns are being readied for re-burning amid others yet to be.

As for Pacific Gas and Electric—they soon declared bankruptcy amid the growing threat of

A female officer with the Sacramento Police Department, Alejandra Gutierrez-Cervantes, is higher paid than both of the police officers who investigated the traffic accident involving Senator Cervantes. Gutierrez-Cervantes, according to the most recently available complete payroll information, received $203,280.99 in total annual compensation in 2024, including a base salary of $99,407, which billion-dollar payoffs to those suing the company (they were later allowed to reach some lower settlements), while the same scenario appears to be the case for Southern California Edison, one of whose decommissioned lines above Altadena is being increasingly seen as the culprit in that town’s obliteration.

It’s also come out that some of the lines above Altadena had been idle for many years amid company assertions that they needed them to stay just in case they ever wanted to use them again, while the undoubtedly true option of undergrounding all lines is affirmed by industry as far safer, but far more expensive—up to ten times the cost of overhead lines.

Now the same can be said for lessons learned and the principles that apply to trains and the options available in how we build them. Case in point: the recent completion of the Metrolink line which recently came into Redlands. I followed this story closely, partly because I’m a big train advocate and partly because I was intimately familiar with the line through Redlands.

Once a nine-mile train spur during the 19th and 20th centuries connecting Redlands to San Bernardino for the shipment of produce from the then thriving citrus industry and various milled grains, I saw possibly one of the last runs through downtown Redlands sometime around 2007 shortly after I’d move there that year; three or so hopper cars with grain from a was marginally higher than Foster’s total annual compensation of $203,128.40 with its base salary of $89,798, and substantially more than Williams’ 2024 total annual compensation of $167,098.47, with its base salary of $96,085.

The department declined to make any statement with regard to the matter involving Senator Cervantes, including the inconsistencies in the manner in which she mill since dismantled.

I also knew the line well because it was one of my running routes through town, affording safe passage down the dirt sides free from the fear of being struck by a motor vehicle with only a few street crossings to be concerned about. So, when the line was proposed for Redlands, while I didn’t like losing my running trail, I was all for it and followed its progress closely.

However, there was one big problem that I and a number of Redlands residents could see as a potential for creating problem in the future: the new Metrolink lines, unlike the wonderful Bay Area Rapid Transit (BART) system (which I’d first ridden on shortly after it opened) are not elevated, but, instead, operate at ground level just like the old ones, and the same would be the case for Redlands, recreating what could be described as yet another example of the “motor vehicle/train interface.”

For some Redlanders, particularly those in the business community, all they could think about was the potential for economic harm to their businesses caused by the traffic tie-ups downtown as the trains passed through, while, for me, all I could think about was the potential for deaths, involving both vehicles and people on foot.

One of the undeniable benefits of elevated railways where vehicles and people never cross paths, is the complete elimination of potential collisions with people both in and out of vehicles, was treated vis-à-vis the other driver, the discrepancies between what was captured on the body-worn camera videos and what was written in the reports and affidavit for the warrant, Quarta’s allegations of perjury and other criminal acts on the part of the department’s officers, Quarta’s accusation of bias toward the senator and the reports of rivalries among members of the department that may or such as an infamous incident in 2005 in Glendale when a man with mental illness and drug addiction was bent or either suicide or causing an incident to impress his estranged wife (not surprisingly the motivation is murky), parked his SUV on the Metrolink track only to abandoned his vehicle at the last moment, which was then struck by the train resulting in 11 deaths.

With elevated trains that can never happen, but when I spoke to several of our city’s governmental “mover and shakers,” including the mayor and at least a couple of city council members, while they conceded the reality of that fact, they also cited the reality of the costs: elevated trains are far more expensive, therefore the line would stay on the ground.

Unfortunately, it wasn’t too long after the line started running in 2022 before what I’d feared would come to pass came to pass, with four deaths in the first six months: one that was definitely suicide; another possibly; and a mother and her daughter, after the woman apparently became confused by the signs and barriers at a street crossing and ended up with her vehicle officials say (the full story has yet to come out amid a pending lawsuit) trapped in traffic between the crossing arms while straddling the tracks when it was far too late for the train to stop.

So, as we’ve seen far too often: cutting costs: important; cutting lives short—not so much. I could go on, but there may not have had an impact on the outcome of the department’s investigation of the accident.

By press time, Quadra had not responded to the Sentinel’s inquiry as to whether complaints relating to the criminal conduct he had alleged in the claim he filed on behalf of Senator Cervantes had been lodged with the Sacramento District Attorney’s Office or the California Attorney General’s Office.

you have it: the many times when lessons were ignored; warnings went unheeded; and lives were lost either through willful neglect; ignorance; the dismissal of potential possibilities; or simply the expediency of cutting costs.

Sadly, the list is endless: a nuclear plant is destroyed by a massive quake and tsunami after it was built next to the ocean and a massive earthquake fault; a space shuttle explodes when, like the Titanic, warnings about ice were dismissed; a town on a flood plain is washed away in a flood, while another built in a forest burns in a forest fire. I could go on, but you get the picture.

And now humans face our most important warning of all: that the continued immense level of emissions from the ever-increasing pace of fossil fuel combustion threatens to collapse the eco-systems upon which all life depends, while millions want to either ignore it or even scorn it all as a hoax.

Of course, we’re being told by many that it’s not too late, but the history of mankind and our endless ability to look reality in the face and ignore it does not bode well for the future, and all I can say is this: one way or another, it’s going to be interesting.
