

Ontario International Airport Contractor Hired Airport Manager’s Daughter

By Mark Gutglueck

Less than two months after a series of FBI raids at the homes and offices of two Ontario International Airport Authority commissioners and those of their political and personal associates put Ontario Airport under the glare of a public spotlight, another development involving the airport’s executive director/manager is subjecting the aerodrome and those running it to a further round of controversy.

In early 2020, then-Ontario International Airport Authority Board President Alan Wapner and the airport authority’s deputy executive director for communications and marketing, Afif Elkadi, sought to assist their fellow USC alum, Scott Jacobson, after the latter had been sacked from his position as the associate athletic director at the University of Southern California in the aftermath of the “VarsityBlues” college admissions scandal that felled a multitude of celebrities, blue bloods and influential titans of finance and industry who used their wealth to have their children accepted at some of the country’s most prestigious colleges and universities in exchange for bribes paid to scholastic deans and other guardians of the gates of academia. Caught up in the scandal along with Jacobson were USC senior associate athletic director Ron Orr, USC athletic department chief operating officer/chief financial officer Steve Lopes, USC soccer coaches Ali Khosroshahin and Laura Janke, athletic department administrator Donna Heinel and water polo coach Jovan Vavic, all of whom were either sacked or resigned. Revealed at the time were that scions of famous actors and wealthy businessmen or industrialists had been given athletic scholarships to USC despite having no skill, no ability and in some cases no familiarity whatsoever with the sports for which those scholarships had been provided in return for a

For more than three decades, the San Bernardino Countywide Gangs & Drugs Task Force has presented itself as a nonprofit coalition of educators, police chiefs, prosecutors and community volunteers working together on gang and drug prevention. Its letterhead from 1992 listed county supervisors, mayors, police chiefs, the sheriff, the district attorney and county counsel among its ranks. Today, according to its own bylaws and public materials, the organization is administered by the Office of the San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools, its finances are handled by the San Bernardino County Sheriff’s Department, and its leadership includes the sitting president of the San Bernardino County Board of Education, the county’s district attorney, a state assembly member, and, as documented below, the sitting mayor of the City of San Bernardino.

A multitude of factors is at play.

At The Forefront Or The End Of Housing Trend, 29 Palms To Permit 3 ADUs Per Lot

As one of San Bernardino County’s most recently incorporated municipalities, Twentynine Palms over the years has also proven to be one of the county’s jurisdictions most resistant to the State of California’s usurpation of local land use authority. It was therefore to the surprise, dismay and delight of many that one set of the city’s officials made a 180-degree reversal from that tradition and this month embraced what is in many circles considered to be the most radical of Sacramento’s notions with regard to modern urban planning.

At its September 15 meeting, the Twentynine Palms Planning Commission broached the concept, which will be considered and wielded into a policy that is potentially to be adopted by the city council as early as next month.

By a 3-to-0 vote, the planning commission, in essence, recommended that the city council revamp the city’s development code in a way that will allow homeowners – that is, those who hold title to existing single family residences – to augment their properties with as many as three so-called accessory dwelling units.

What is afoot as a consequence of this re-orientation toward what the standards for living arrangements the community is to adhere to is the quality of life a significant portion of the population in Twentynine Palms over the next several generations. In essence, the planning commission is calling upon the city council to allow the density of single family homes already built in the city or to be built in the future to be quadrupled.

A multitude of factors is at play.

As part of its concerted effort with other public agencies to drive the homeless population out of San Bernardino County, sheriff’s deputies on September 4 confronted 64 people they had grounds to believe were living on the streets of Loma Linda, Grand Terrace and unincorporated areas of San Bernardino County. The deputies offered to drive them and their belongings, no questions asked and without checking to see if they had any outstanding warrants, to any destination of their choosing in contiguous Los Angeles County, Riverside County, Orange County, Kern County Inyo County, Kern County, Clark County in Nevada and Cochise County in Arizona. Those who accepted the offer were given conveyance to wherever they wanted to go, and provided with a hot fast food meal to boot. Those who refused were identified by the forced production of identification or the use of what one lieutenant in the department called “alternate means.” They were then subjected to checks utilizing their names, birthdates, license or registration numbers against the data bases shared by California law enforcement agencies – NCIC, the National Crime Information Center, considered the United States’ primary database and information registry for tracking crime-related information, maintained by the Criminal Justice Information Services Division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; the California Law Enforcement Telecom-

Circumstances support 180 degree opposite interpretations of the prospect that prosecutors will be able to get the murder charge lodged against 53-yr-old Jeff Anthony Maiorca to stick.

The San Bernardino County District Attorney’s Office is proceeding with the theory advanced that Maiorca, then 33 years old, murdered his ex-wife, 29-year-old Jill Maiorca, in November 2006, more than two years after he had initiated divorce proceedings against her.

The case involves more than one anomaly.

Jill Maiorca was not reported as missing until 2007. Based upon evidence developed by homicide detectives with the San Bernardino County Sheriff’s Department, she died as the result of foul play months prior to that. Ultimately, investigators say, her body was disposed of beneath the wooden floor joists of a home in a residential area of Big Bear, in the community where the couple lived prior to their divorce, and where Jeff Maiorca was yet residing as of earlier this month.

minimum fee, i.e., bribe of $250,000 and in a few known cases as much as $500,000. An internal review of the situation by USC determined that there were grounds to believe that 33 students were admitted to the college under circumstances that involved fraud or deceit, in which 12 of those students were not involved or could not be proved to be involved in violating the school's admissions procedure, while the remaining 21 were found to have knowingly made false representations about themselves or had others do so, and were in various ways involved in patently dishonest acts such as having others take SAT tests for them or assume their identities in completing the admissions process, including sitting for interviews.

Initially, Wapner and Elkadi entertained the idea of creating an in-house advertising arm for the airport, one that would include promoting the airport at various sporting and entertainment events and venues, and installing Jacobson as the head of the department. They ran head-on into the consideration that two of the divisions of Lamar Advertising – that pertaining to advertisement in general and its airport advertising division – at that point was not quite three years into a ten-year contract related to advertising with Ontario International Airport and the Ontario International Airport Authority that had been initiated in July of 2017 and yet had seven more years to run. Lamar's was a multidimensional national advertising agency with contracts with 25 airports around the country and established penetration into a wealth of venues where promotion of the airport had already been positively demonstrated in terms of boosting ridership levels and recognition of the airport. Within Ontario specifically, Lamar was responsible for the airport advertising program, including indoor and outdoor advertising displays within Terminals 2 and 4, which handled the domestic traffic at the airport departing and arriving, and airport parking venues, as well as billboard signage on airport property.

Mark Thorpe, then the airport authority's executive director who oversaw management, operations, development, and marketing of the airport was skeptical about what services Jacobson, whose primary experience confined itself to be a university associate athletic director, could offer the airport authority and the airport. He was satisfied with Lamar's performance and saw no benefit from instituting a redundancy of the nature that Wapner and Elkadi were advocating with the creation of an advertising department and the hiring of Jacobson.

Wapner hit upon an alternate strategy. By the summer of 2020, as the entire airline industry was hit with substantial downturns in ridership as a consequence of the COVID-19 pandemic, Wapner began bemoaning Lamar's performance. Utilizing the very tangible evidence of the declining numbers of passengers passing through Ontario International Airport's gates, he maneuvered around Thorpe, working in unison with Elkadi, who directly oversaw the airport's advertising. On February 1, 2021, the Ontario International Airport Authority entered into a $96,000 annual contract with Fuse Advancement, as it was identified in the contract. At that point Fuse Advancement had no contracts with any airports or any entities, for that matter. It did not, in fact exist. According to the California Secretary of State, Fuse Advancement was not registered as a business entity until February 18, 2021, 17 days after it was first granted a contract with the airport authority. Subsequently, on May 27, 2021, the contract with Fuse Advancement was increased to $240,500 per year. Though both Lamar and Fuse Advancement fell under the rubric of being advertising and promotion companies and both engaged in the promotion of Ontario International Airport, there were elements of their separate functions that differed somewhat. The break with Lamar did not come off as cleanly as Wapner had hoped, and the Ontario International Airport Authority had to buy out the remaining six years of the contract with Lamar.

A significant number of Ontario International Airport Authority employees, indeed upwards of 80 percent of them, and at least one of the airport authority board members knew nothing about the previous relationship between Wapner and Jacobson as the transition from Lamar to Fuse Advancement was being effectuated.

Wapner is a member of the USC Class of 1978 and self-identifies as a Trojan. Like hundreds of other USC alums, Wapner is a participant in the Trojan Athletic Fund, and as such was frequently in attendance at USC's home football games at the Coliseum/United Airlines Field, where he viewed the action on the gridiron in a seating section reserved for VIPs. More notably, documentation obtained by the Sentinel shows that Wapner was the recipient of a lagniappe arranged for him through Jacobson, the value of which cannot be quantified, that being the rare privilege of traveling with the football team on certain away games such as those vs. Notre Dame in South Bend, Indiana on October 12, 2019 and the contest against the University of Texas in Austin, Texas on September 15, 2018. During the years Jacobson was associate athletic director, he regularly made arrangements to have Wapner fly with the team to the locations where they were playing. Subsequent to Jacobson's departure as associate athletic director, there was a carryover of the rapport the councilman had established with the USC athletic department through Jacobson, as when he continued to travel with the football in 2020 and 2021, such as to Denver, Colorado for the team's match-up against Colorado on October 2, 2021.

Thorpe's tenure as interim executive director of the airport/airport authority lasted from July 2017 to October 2017, and his official tenure as the full-fledged executive director last four years and five months from October 2017 to March 31, 2022. Throughout the last three years of his time as executive director, Thorpe and Wapner were on increasingly acrimonious terms, as Wapner dominated the airport board of commissioners and was dictating policy virtually unilaterally, pursuing policies, including overtures to sell what he defined as "surplus" airport property to real estate speculators and development companies which had made substantial donations to his political fund. Thorpe resisted several initiatives that Wapner was pursuing in this regard. By October 2021, the relationship between Wapner and Thorpe had deteriorated that Thorpe was placed on a special assignment, during which time he was restricted from contacting staff except with regard to those areas relating to his limited assignment. From that point forward, Elkadi, having been designated by Wapner, began serving as the de facto executive director of the airport, despite his lack of expertise in virtually all areas beyond communications and marketing. On January 21, 2022, Thorpe submitted his resignation as CEO, with his term ending March 31, 2022.

Elkadi immediately transitioned to acting CEO and in short order Wapner lined up the votes to promote him to the airport and airport authority's chief executive officer.

Even before Thorpe's departure, complaints emanating from Ontario residents relating to Wapner's actions in his role as president/chairman of the airport commission had been lodged with the FBI.

The focus of that investigation over the course of more than five years has expanded and evolved to touch on quid pro quo arrangements, specifically alleged bribes or kickbacks from individuals, businesses, and entities seeking project approvals, contracts, or franchises from the airport authority, the City of Ontario and San Bernardino County's government structure, as well as overseas banking activity, particularly involving financial institutions in the People's Republic of China, and related cryptocurrency exchange access and account codes pertaining to Wapner and another member of the Ontario International Airport Authority, San Bernardino County Fourth District Supervisor Curt Hagman.

On July 28 of this year, the FBI served search warrants at homes of Wapner, Hagman, James Su and Frank Lizarraga, located, respectively, in Ontario, Chino, West Covina and in Rancho Cucamonga. A search warrant was simultaneously served at a mansion in the 600 block of North Canon Drive of Beverly Hills, the domicile of a yet undisclosed individual.

James Su is the owner, president and manager of EDI Media, the California-based West Coast arm of Guoguang Century Media, which consists of 34 radio stations in 14 countries. Guoguang Century Media is backed and funded by China Radio International, the state-owned international radio broadcasting network of the People's Republic of China. Guoguang Century Media is dedicated to producing content aligned with Beijing's interests, both domestically and internationally. In 1993, using funding provided to him by the Chinese government through Guoguang Century Media, Su founded EDI Media, Inc., which is now affiliated with G&E Studio Inc. and CiTi News, a company of which Su is the president that includes multiple TV stations, radio stations, magazines, and newspapers. Su and his employees were substantial donors to Hagman's political campaign fund. Lizarraga is closely identified with the City of Ontario, having had three offices in the city. He was a member of the Ontario Planning Commission for 13 years. He has served as Wapner's personal attorney and that of Wapner's wife, for Ontario Councilwoman Daisy Macias tion relating to Jill Maiorca, which was classified as a missing person’s case, had lain dormant for more than 13 years. According to the sheriff’s department, “On Wednesday, October 28, 2020, at approximately 11:12 a.m., deputies from the Big Bear Sheriff’s

Station responded to a call for service in the 39000 block of Forest Road, in Big Bear Lake. The reporting party requested law enforcement assistance after making a suspicious discovery in the crawlspace under the residence. Big Bear Station deputies and personnel from the Big Bear Fire Department responded to the location and discovered unidentified human remains in the crawlspace beneath the residence. Detectives from the San Bernardino County Sheriff’s Department specialized investigations division, homicide detail, responded and assumed the investigation. An autopsy was conducted on the remains, and the manner of death was determined to be homicide. Despite DNA testing and continued investigative efforts, the identity of the deceased remained unknown, and the investigation remained unsolved. “In 2023, the sheriff’s cold case homicide team assumed the investigation and submitted the remains for additional investigative

DNA analysis,” the sheriff’s department continues. “The remains were ultimately identified as those of Jill Maiorca. Detectives learned Jill had been reported missing from Big Bear Lake in 2007. Through continued investigation, detectives identified Jill’s former husband, Jeff Maiorca, as a suspect in her murder. Evidence developed during the investigation indicates Jill was murdered in November 2006. Her remains were concealed beneath the Forest Road residence without the homeowner’s knowledge.” Nearly two decades had elapsed since the time investigators say Jill Maiorca died, almost six years since her body was found and a substantial amount of time since her remains were identified and Jeff Maiorca was identified as the suspect in her murder. Jeff Maiorca was arrested on September 21, 2026 at the temporary headquarters for the San Bernardino County Sheriff’s Department in Big Bear Lake located on the west side of the Big Bear Li-decades, public officials at the state, regional and local levels, noting the escalation in real estate prices generally and residential real estate in particular and an accompanying increase in the homeless population have declared that a housing shortage exists. In response, the governor, state legislature and the California Department of Housing and Community Development have intensified what were previously modest efforts to encourage homebuilding. One of these is the transition of the Regional Housing Needs Assessment Survey – what was created in 1969 and intended to be a snapshot of the state’s housing stock and where it stood in relation to the housing demand – from an advisory to a requirement. As the consequence of legislation and state policy, the Regional Housing Needs Survey process, now administered by the California Department of Housing and Community Development, elevates an estimation made by governmental regional planning collectives of how many dwelling units are needed in specific geographical areas into a mandate that the governmental jurisdictions in those areas accommodate the construction of those estimated number of units if the building industry seeks permits to undertake such development. In the case of Southern California, excluding San Diego County, the Southern California Association of Governments ascertained that Imperial, Orange, Los Angeles, Ventura, San Bernardino and Riverside Counties, during the October 2021 to October 2029 planning cycle should be prepared to approve the construction of 1,340,000 dwelling units, of which San Bernardino County’s share was 138,110 new housing units over the eight-year period and Twentynine Palms was to provide 1,047 residential units.

The drafting a passage of the State Housing Crisis Act of 2019 sought to overcome the shortage of available housing to the need for more homes by streamlining housing development processes. The California legislature passed and the governor passed into law legislation establishing California Government Code §65580, which in part declared that “availability of housing is of Continued on Page 4 direct review of three years of those records, dozens of agendas and minutes spanning 2023 through 2025, along with the bylaws, a formal Brown Act cure-and-correct demand, the San Bernardino County superintendent of schools’ response, and the organization’s own promotional materials. A Familiar Playbook: The San Bernardino County District Advocates for Better Schools Precedent The underlying legal question isn’t new. In February 2024, the California Attorney General Rob Bonta issued Opinion No. 22-402, concluding that another San Bernardino County superintendent of schools

-affiliated group, the San Bernardino County District Advocates for Better Schools, or SANDABS, qualifies as a ‘legislative body’ under the Brown Act (Gov. Code § 54952) because it was created by public agencies, staffed by public employees, funded through public channels, and administered by the Office of the San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools, known by the acronym SBCSS. That opinion is the yardstick against which the San Bernardino Countywide Gangs & Drugs Task Force’s own structure is now being measured, and the parallels are substantial: The San Bernardino County superintendent of schools performs the Countywide Gangs & Drugs Task Force’s administrative functions under its own bylaws; the sheriff’s department serves as fiscal agent; the task force’s executive board is dominated by elected officials and agency heads; and the organization operates from public facilities under a mission coordinating law enforcement, education, probation, and elected officials on public-safety programming, which mirrors the kind of governmental function the California Attorney General cited in the San Bernardino County District Advocates for Better Schools opinion. What Three Years of Records Actually Show The bylaws require the San Bernardino

County Gangs and Drug Task Force Executive Board to meet monthly, apart from July, to elect officers, approve budgets, and govern the organization. Separately, the bylaws call for general membership meetings on a different schedule. That distinction turns out to matter enormously, because a direct review of the records the county produced shows something the earlier legal analysis had only Continued on Page 6 vital statewide importance, and the early attainment of decent housing and a suitable living environment...is a priority of the highest order” and that the “early attainment of this goal requires the cooperative participation of government and the private sector in an effort to expand housing opportunities and accommodate the housing needs of Californians” and that “each local government... has the responsibility... to cooperate with other local governments and the state in addressing regional housing needs.”

Traditionally in California, land use decisions had been left to local governments rather than to the state legislature or bureaucrats in the state capital. In this way, city councils or planning commissions, in consultation with city planning staffs determined the character of the development that was to take place in their individual cities and how intensely the properties in their communities were to be developed. Hanging in the balance was the question of density, or how many dwelling units were allowed to be constructed per acre, the height of buildings, the ratio of space occupied by buildings to the space occupied by unpaved ground with grass or plants growing on it, the mix of residential, commercial, industrial development and open space to be permitted in a city, along with whether apartments and condominiums should be allowed to displace single family homes. These decisions historically were left to the people who lived in the places that were to be impacted by the decisions. In the rush to redress the state housing crisis, action by the state, including the State Housing Crisis Act of 2019, were reducing local control the quality and type of development taking place. Something on the order of two dozen of the 482 cities and incorporated towns in California resisted the state’s seizing of land use authority as pertained to housing. Among those in San Bernardino County standing up and speaking most vociferously with regard to state mandates on residential uses were Chino Hills, Chino, Fontana and Barstow, all of which petitioned the California Department of Housing and Community Development for reduced Regional Housing Needs Assessment unit construction mandates.

Twentynine Palms did not contest the state housing mandates. On another issue involving the imposition of Sacramento’s will with regard to land use and development policy, however, Twentynine Palms actively resisted state-level land use mandates well prior to the fuss over the impact of the State Housing Crisis Act of 2019’s impact on local planning control when in 2012 the city passed an ordinance banning utility-scale solar fields within city limits. This set up a conflict with the State of California over California Assembly Bill 205, legislation which created a state law granting the California Energy Commission the authority to override local municipal zoning and issue automatic approvals for clean energy projects that meet certain criteria, effectively bypassing local planning commissions. Solons in Twentynine Palms reiterated their adherence to the concept of localized resistance to state sovereignty as recently as March 2026, when the Twentynine Palms City Council officially voted to deny a proposal by E-Group Solar to install a 50-megawatt, 160,000-panel facility across 184 acres.

While Twentynine distinguished itself as taking a principled stand against the state on the battleground of local environmental control and, more or less, prevailing, the cities that duked it out with the state over Sacramento’s intrusion into the province of land use policy related to residential projects did not fare as well. The City of Huntington Beach, which had taken the most forthright, energetic and aggressive position among the state’s cities in opposing the state’s dictates, was rebuffed in state court. Chino Hills’, Chino’s, Fontana’s and Barstow’s petitions to reduce the Regional Housing Assessment unit numbers they had been saddled were denied, and they were issued stern warnings by the California Department of Housing and Community Development that they would need to comply with California Government Code §65580.

To facilitate local jurisdictions – counties, cities and towns – in complying with California Government Code §65580, Governor Gavin Newsom in September 2024 signed into law three legislative bills – Assembly Bill 2533, Senate Bill 1211 and Senate Bill 1077 – which took effect on January 1, 2025. That legislation gave homeowners the power to double the density of their residential property by constructing on it an “accessory dwelling unit,” known by its acronym ADU, otherwise referred to as a “granny flat.”

On September 15, the Twentynine Palms Planning Commission went the State of California not one, not two but three better, calling upon the Twentynine Palms City Council to give homeowners the ability to construct three accessory dwelling units on their property.

With Commissioners Max Walker and Alex Garcia were absent, commissioner Jim Krushat, Leslie Paahana and Leslie Cure voted to repeal in its entirety that section of the Twentynine Palms Development Code pertaining to accessory dwelling units and update and replace it with a liberalized set of regulations, as was articulated in a staff report,

“to maintain consistency with state law and support streamlined housing production.”

Among city staff members, most notably Community Development Director Keith Gardner there is a perceived need to bring the city’s general plan and other planning documents and stated policies in compliance with state laws and regulations pertaining to housing programs and mandates.

The ordinance proposed by the city’s planning staff and the three participating members of the planning commission at the meeting on September 15 for adoption by the city council would repeal and replace Chapter 19.134 in its entirety, such as to bring the city into conformance with state law.

What is being proposed would apply to a range of dwelling unit add-ons, including ones defined as both accessory dwelling units and so-called junior accessory dwelling units.

According to the documents contemplated for inclusion in the development code redraft, “Accessory Dwelling Unit (ADU)’ means an attached or a detached residential dwelling unit that provides complete independent living facilities for one or more persons and is located on a lot with a proposed or existing primary dwelling. An ADU shall include permanent provisions for living, sleeping, eating, cooking, and sanitation.” According to the document, an accessory dwelling unit can also consist of an efficiency unit or a manufactured home. The document also defines an attached ADU as “an accessory dwelling unit that shares at least one wall with a primary dwelling” and defines a Conversion ADU as “an accessory dwelling unit created from existing habitable or nonhabitable space within an existing dwelling unit or accessory structure, including but not limited to storage rooms, boiler rooms, passageways, attics, basements, or garages.” The documents further define a detached ADU as a “residential dwelling unit which does not share any portion of a wall with the primary residence but may be attached by a breezeway or roof structure that is open on at least two sides.” The documentation defines a junior accessory dwelling unit (JADU) as “a residential dwelling unit that: 1) is contained entirely within an existing or proposed single-family dwelling [and] includes an efficiency kitchen.”

An efficiency kitchen is a compact, self-contained cooking area that includes essential appliances—typically a small sink, a two-burner cooktop, and an under-counter refrigerator—designed to maximize functionality in very limited space.

According to the city documentation, “An ADU or JADU... shall [b]e considered an accessory use and shall not be counted toward the allowable residential density for the lot upon which it is located... [b]e considered a residential use that is consistent with applicable general plan and zoning designations for the lot on which it is located... [n]ot be denied, delayed, or conditioned based on any local ordinance, policy, or regulation that conflicts with applicable State law [and] [n]ot be required to correct a nonconforming zoning condition as a condition of approval.”

The documents further state, “A JADU shall be permitted on a lot containing an existing or proposed single-family dwelling in accordance with applicable State law and this chapter. A JADU shall be contained entirely within the walls of an existing or proposed single-family dwelling, including within an attached garage that has been converted to habitable space.”

The documentation being presented to the city council further calls for allowing up to three granny flats on existing residential property in Twentynine Palms that consist of lots which are at least 0.4591 of an acre under a section of the city’s proposed development code entitled “Additional ADU Allowance.” That section states, “In addition to the ADU and JADU opportunities otherwise permitted pursuant to this chapter and applicable State law, the city allows one additional ADU on a lot containing an existing or proposed single-family dwelling, subject to the following requirements.” The chapter further states, under a heading of “Eligibility for an Additional ADU” that “The lot shall be a minimum of twenty thousand (20,000) square feet and shall contain an existing or proposed single family dwelling. In addition to the ADU and JADU opportunities otherwise permitted pursuant to this chapter and applicable State law, the city allows one additional ADU on a lot containing an existing or proposed single-family dwelling, subject to the following requirements: The lot shall be a minimum of twenty thousand (20,000) square feet and shall contain an existing or proposed single family dwelling. The additional ADU may be attached, detached, or created through the conversion of existing space, subject to the applicable development standards of this chapter. The additional ADU shall comply with all applicable building, fire, and health and safety requirements.”

An acre is equal to 43,560 square feet.

do International Airport, covering the full distance in about 3 hours and 25 minutes at top speeds of 125 mph. Brightline’s Phase 1 in South Florida, which launched in 2018, utilizes upgraded tracks along the century-old Florida East Coast Railway corridor connecting Miami, Fort Lauderdale, and West Palm Beach. The company’s Phase 2 East-West Connector, which opened in September 2023, is a dedicated 35-mile, fenced, grade-separated rail corridor alongside the Beachline Expressway, also known as State Route 528, from Cocoa to Orlando International Airport. The established stations in Florida include MiamiCentral Station, the Aventura Station, the Fort Lauderdale Station, the West Palm Beach Station and the Orlando International Airport Station. Despite the ostensible success of Brightline’s rail operations in Florida, including what might otherwise be considered decent ridership levels, the company this week filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection due to the ridership levels not reaching the levels that had been confidently predicted for them, leaving the company heavily in debt. Brightline boasts ridership in Florida of roughly 3.5 million passengers, paying anywhere from $80 to $400 per roundtrip ticket each, per year, generating revenue in the area of $240 million annually. The company experienced an annual growth in ridership and revenue averaging 17 percent over the last three years. Nevertheless, for the last two-to-two-and-half years, the company has been trying to find a way to reduce its existing debt by $6 billion, as the growth

it is experiencing is being consumed by that debt. That could have been realistically done if the trains had twice their ridership. Indeed, as late as 2024, it had been the company’s hope that the number of travelers on the trains might reach 7 million per year by this year. That has not come about. As a consequence, Brightline had to back up and regroup, thus the bankruptcy. Just as there was tremendous confidence and exuberance about the Florida Brightline undertaking, there has all along been the same degree of confidence about the success of the future Rancho Cucamonga-to-Vegas line, which is to later to become an Anaheim-to-Vegas line and then ultimately a Los Angeles-to-Vegas line. Having been subsidized with a $3 billion federal grant and allocated another $3.5 billion in federal tax-exempt Private Activity Bonds, Brightline went and for Ontario Councilman Jim Bowman, who is also a member of the Ontario International Airport Board of Commissioners. Lizarraga was the former general counsel to the Southern California Association of Governments, representing six counties.

In addition, on July 28, search warrants were served at Hagman’s San Bernardino County Fourth District supervisorial office located in the Chino Hills municipal government complex; the EDI corporate office in West Covina; Lizarraga’s law office in Ontario; and the business offices of Andrea “Andy” Sehremelis in Chino. Sehremelis is a major donor to the campaign funds of both Wapner and Hagman. In addition, the FBI submitted subpoenas to the offices of the Ontario city clerk and the airport authority’s executive suite and administrative offices on Avion Drive at the airport.

The FBI’s activity proved to be unsettling in the Ontario community, the Fourth Supervisorial District in Southwest San Bernardino County, at Ontario City Hall, at the airport, its administrative offices, the offices of the airport authority and, to a somewhat lesser extent, in Los Angeles County in West Covina and the Mansion District of Beverly Hills. Before the FBI raids, Wapner was running for mayor in the upcoming November 3 election, challenging the incumbent, Paul Leon, and Hagman’s son, Jonathan, was vying for a position on the Ontario City Council, representing the city’s Third District. Following the raids, Wapner dropped out of the mayor’s contest to run for election in the city’s Third District and young Hagman dropped out of the council race entirely.

In the midst of this, in the last two weeks comes word that Elkadi’s 24-year-old daughter, Abigail daughter, Abigail Elkadi, has been hired by Jacobson to work for Fuse Advancement. This has caused quite a stir. While some see no particular problem with young Elkadi finding a job, and there are assertions that as a parent, Elkadi has no control over what his adult children do., nevertheless, some are suggesting that Jacobson hiring Elkadi’s daughter at Fuse when Elkadi played a primary role in providing the company with a contract that has resulted in payments to that company of more than $1.25 million over the last five years is improper. At the very least, some of the same people who were instrumental in getting the FBI investigation rolling that resulted in July 28 serving of search warrants are saying, it looks bad. Others have alleged that it constitutes nepotism that crosses the line into a criminal conflict of interest. The Sentinel this morning in an email to Elkadi asked him to on the record on behalf of the airport authority with regard to the matter. The Sentinel asked him if it was appropriate for Fuse to hire his daughter and if there was any problem with Fuse having hired a member of the airport authority’s general manager’s family. The Sentinel asked Elkadi, if he did not consider the situation to be problematic, to provide a cogent refutation to those who say it is. The Sentinel sought from him an encapsulation of the airport authority’s position vis-à-vis those calling for him to resign over what has occurred. The Sentinel further sought from him what the airport authority’s position is with regard to those who are calling for the airport authority to end its relationship with Fuse and Jacobson. The Sentinel asked if the airport authority is reevaluating its contractual relationship with Fuse. Elkadi did not respond. However, the airport authority’s/airport’s spokesman, Steve Lambert did react to an email posing similar questions to the airport authority for official comment, stating, “Your ridiculous inquiry attempts to manufacture a controversy out of the employment of the CEO’s daughter by a private company. She is an adult, pursuing her own career and making her own professional decisions. The suggestion that her employment somehow constitutes grounds for her father’s resignation—or should dictate the airport’s relationship with an outside firm—is an extraordinary leap, and nothing presented in your inquiry establishes a factual basis for it.” Lambert said, “More troubling is the decision to make a family member part of the Sentinel’s continuing campaign against Ontario International Airport. The airport has tolerated a steady stream of Sentinel stories and inquiries built around accusations, innuendo and false claims advanced by individuals who plainly have grievances against the airport and its leadership. You have repeatedly and apparently intentionally misstated generally available facts about the airport, its success since its return to local control and its impact on this vibrant region we serve. You have steadfastly refused to provide the same level of scrutiny to those who are feeding you misinformation, all while hiding their identities. But going after someone’s daughter is beyond the pale. Public officials and executives of public agencies should expect scrutiny. Their children should not become collateral damage simply because someone is looking for another angle of attack.” Making no acknowledgment of Fuse’s status as a contractor to a public agency or Elkadi role in heading that public agency, Lambert implied that Fuse’s hiring of Elkadi’s daughter had no public relevance. “Your predicate—asking the airport to rebut unnamed people who are supposedly demanding resignations and terminated contracts—is not a factual one,” Lambert asserted. “It is an invitation to participate in the creation of a controversy. We decline to do so.” The Sentinel’s coverage of the matter relating to the Fuse contract, Atif Elkadi’s role as the executive director of the airport and airport authority, Abigail’s hiring by Fuse and a host of other issues pertaining to Ontario International Airport and the airport authority, Lambert said “is unfair, misleading and driven more by personal vendettas than by a legitimate effort to inform the public. This latest inquiry fits a pattern we have seen repeatedly, and bringing an adult daughter into it takes that pattern to a disturbing new level.” The matter pertaining to Abigail Elkadi’s hiring by Fuse following her father’s participation in extending a public contract to Fuse is paralleled by the circumstance involving former Los Angeles City Councilman Mark Ridley-Thomas, who was also at one time a member of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors, an Assemblyman and a California State Senator. Ridley-Thomas was convicted in 2023 on five counts of honest services wire fraud, one count of conspiracy and one count of bribery involving programs receiving federal funds. The case centered on a quid pro quo scheme between Ridley-Thomas, then a Los Angeles County Supervisor, and Marilyn Flynn, then dean of the USC School of Social Work. Prosecutors alleged that Flynn arranged for benefits for Ridley-Thomas’ son, Sebastian – including USC graduate school admission, a full-tuition scholarship, and a paid professorship – in exchange for Ridley-Thomas’ support for a telehealth contract between Los Angeles County and USC. In March 2023, a Los Angeles federal jury found him guilty on the seven counts but acquitted him of 12 other fraud charges. In August 2023, he was sentenced to 42 months in federal prison and a $30,000 fine The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld his convictions in August 2026. Unlike Ridley-Thomas, Atif Elkadi is not an elected official. Nevertheless, Elkadi served in a key decision-making role with regard to the hiring of Fuse Advancement. As in the Ridley-Thomas matter, Ontario International Airport receives federal funds. The U.S. Attorney’s Office in Los Angeles, which prosecuted Ridley-Thomas, is overseeing the production of evidence being accumulated in the FBI’s investigation of Ontario International Airport and the airport authority, and will handle the prosecutions that may result suspected: every document turned over, every single agenda and every set of minutes from 2023 through 2025 is labeled a “general membership meeting.” Not one executive board agenda, and not one set of executive board minutes, appears anywhere in three years of production.

That is not a minor omission. It means the public record shows only the informational, presentation-driven meetings the San Bernardino County District Advocates for Better Schools holds for outside groups and community partners, never the sessions in which its governing board, by its own bylaws, is supposed to elect officers, approve its budget, and make binding decisions. If those executive board meetings take place, as the bylaws require, there is no public paper trail of them in what the county has disclosed.

A second pattern emerged from reading the agendas themselves. Every agenda reviewed for this story follows the same template: a call to order, introductions, minutes, program presentation, then announcements and adjournment. Some agendas add a “questions & answers” item, but it is tied specifically to that meeting’s invited presenter, never a standing invitation for members of the public to address the board on any subject of their choosing, which is the type of general public-comment period the Brown Act requires of bodies it covers.

A third pattern involves where the meetings are held. With only occasional exceptions, the minutes show meetings taking place inside the San Bernardino County Sheriff’s Department headquarters at 655 East Third Street, or at San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools’ Dorothy Inghram Learning Center, never at a neutral or privately-operated venue. Both are public buildings staffed by the same agencies that run the task force’s administrative and fiscal functions.

The Rotating Chair

The bylaws limit board members to three consecutive terms “per title,” while explicitly allowing unlimited service if members simply rotate titles. The minutes show that provision in action. From 2023 through 2025, both Dr. Gwen Dowdy-Rodgers and Dr. Scott Wyatt appear, in different months and different years, personally calling meetings to order and personally adjourning them, the functions of a presiding chair. The San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools’ own 2025 roster lists Dowdy-Rodgers as chairperson and Wyatt as vice chair; earlier minutes show Wyatt exercising the chair’s gavel just as often. Whatever the formal title on paper in a given month, the same two people have effectively shared the task force’s top leadership position for years, one of them, Dowdy-Rodgers, the sitting president of the San Bernardino County Board of Education, the other, Wyatt, a San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools employee and elected trustee of the San Bernardino City Unified School District.

A City Mayor on the Board

The executive board roster already included the county’s district attorney, its schools superintendent, and a state assembly member. The minutes add another name: San Bernardino Mayor Helen Tran is listed as a citizen-at-large executive board member on the San Bernardino County District Advocates for Better Schools’ own 2025 roster, and appears in an August 2023 meeting delivering a presentation, in her capacity as mayor, on the city’s homelessness response. A sitting city mayor serving on the governing board of an organization administered by the county schools office and financed through the sheriff’s department is one more thread tying the task force’s leadership to elected officials whose own agencies the task force regularly showcases.

Where the Scholarship Money Comes From

The minutes also put a number on the grant and scholarship activity the earlier analysis flagged as an open question. In 2024, the San Bernardino County Gangs and Drugs Task Force, known by its acronym GDTF, awarded 44 scholarships of $1,000 each; the following year, roughly 30 more were awarded. The June 2024 minutes state plainly that the scholarship program was made possible through the Children Deserve Success Department with the San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools, the sheriff’s department, the district attorney’s office, the probation department, and the public defender’s office and five different public agencies. Applications were reviewed by a panel that included a sheriff’s deputy, an assistant sheriff, and a San Bernardino County superintendent of schools staff member, not an independent scholarship committee insulated from the agencies whose money and staff time fund the program. Separately, the Office of the San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools has publicly touted a $20,000 grant from the county probation department presented directly to the Gangs and Drugs Task Force.

The Paper Trail: A Cure-and-Correct Demand, and an Unusual Denial

On August 28, 2025, a formal “cure and correct” demand under Government Code § 54960.1 was addressed to County Superintendent Ted Alejandre and the San Bernardino County Board of Education. The demand alleged that the San Bernardino County District Advocates for Better Schools’ executive board was violating the Brown Act by holding monthly meetings without public notice, agendas, or an opportunity for public comment, with meeting information effectively hidden inside an internal San Bernardino County superintendent of schools staff event system accessible only through a school-district registration portal. A follow-up addendum on September 1, 2025, renewed the demand and invoked the California Attorney General Office’s opinion relating to the San Bernardino County District Advocates for Better Schools matter directly.

The response came on September 26, 2025, not from the board of education or Superintendent Alejandre, but from Jenny Owen, the San Bernardino County superintendent of schools’ director of communications and intergovernmental affairs. Owen’s letter stated plainly that “the task force is not a part of SBCSS,” while acknowledging in the same paragraph that the San Bernardino County superintendent of schools “serves as the administrative agent for the task force.” The letter asserted that the San Bernardino County District Advocates for Better Schools was never created by a legislative body, that participating officials serve “in their personal capacities” rather than as agency representatives, and that neither the San Bernardino County superintendent of schools nor the sheriff’s department is itself “governed by a legislative body,” a characterization that, on its face, is difficult to reconcile with the county board of education’s own role as the San Bernardino County superintendent of schools’ governing board, or the sheriff’s department’s status as a county department under an elected sheriff. The letter separately asserted that a cure-and-correct demand was the wrong legal vehicle in any case, since the cure-and-correct demand had not identified a specific board action to invalidate, only an ongoing pattern of closed meetings. It closed by declaring the matter concluded.

Who Sits on the Board – and Whom They Answer To Public records and the San Bernardino County District Advocates for Better Schools’ own materials show an executive board with substantial overlap between the task force’s leadership and the very institutions meant to oversee, fund, or answer to it:

- Gwen Dowdy-Rodgers - San Bernardino County Gangs and Drugs Task Force chairwoman (2025 roster), and, separately, president of the San Bernardino County Board of Education, the body that oversees the Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools. Minutes show she and Scott Wyatt have effectively alternated the chair’s duties across 2023–2025.
- Scott Wyatt - San Bernardino County Gangs and Drugs Task Force vice chairman (2025 roster), a Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools employee, and an elected trustee of the San Bernardino City Unified School District — the same board Dowdy-Rodgers previously served on. Minutes repeatedly show him presiding as Chair in other years and months.
- Ted Alejandre – County Superintendent of Schools, serving as San Bernardino County Gangs and Drugs Task Force ex officio member, while his agency simultaneously administers the task force.
- Jason Anderson – San Bernardino County district attorney, listed as an executive board member and shown in attendance at task force meetings, whose office would ordinarily be positioned to evaluate potential Brown Act or conflict-of-interest complaints touching county bodies.

- Helen Tran – Mayor of the City of San Bernardino, listed as a citizen-at-large executive board member, who has also appeared before the board as a featured presenter on city policy.
- James C. Ramos – State Assemblyman, listed as the board’s legislative representative; Rosilicie Ochoa Bogh, a State Senator, is listed in the same category.
- Brenda Dowdy- a citizen-at-large representative on the board who, according to the underlying cure-and-correct correspondence, is Gwen Dowdy-Rodgers’ sister, and who has chaired the scholarship-announcement process at board meetings.
- Sherman Garnett and Don English – Garnett is a former SBCSS administrator and current San Bernardino County District Advocates for Better Schools executive board member; English, the San Bernardino County District Advocates for Better Schools’ executive director, is also an San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools administrator whom Garnett is said to have recommended for the position. Garnett has separately been paid by the San Bernardino County Superintendent of School on a per-attendee basis for workshops, compensation that, according to the cure-and-correct correspondence, has at times equated to more than $3,000 per instructional hour.

None of these relationships is illegal on its own. Family members, former colleagues, and overlapping public officials serve together on boards throughout California without running afoul of any law. But taken together, a rotating chair shared by two San Bernardino County superintendent of schools-linked officials, a city mayor, a district attorney, a state legislator and a scholarship-review panel staffed by the same sheriff’s office that holds the money, the pattern is precisely the kind of
